Why Not Hunt Gold?
Is the Rest Silence?
One Kaiser's Life.
Free, Nowhere to Go.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

HODGE, Mojave Desert, Cal., Jan. 28.

THE WORLD needs more gold and may get it. France and Uncle Sam now control the world's supply, France with the highest per capita gold reserve. Hard times have sent prospectors back to hills and mountains, their "good times easy jobs" in cities having vanished. You see more and more of them traveling this desert country, each, in his years of prospecting, probably passing great fortunes a dozen times. To prospect is one thing, to find is another.

USUALLY THE prospector rides one donkey, two others following. One donkey carries the camping outfit, with blankets and "grub," the other carries prospector's tools, and more food. Perhaps a few sticks of dynamite are carried by the more enterprising.

An occasional prospector, too old to ride long hours, drives two donkeys hitched to a two-wheel cart, a pole between them. Up hills and mountains too rough for his cart, he rides one donkey, leaving the other below.

THESE MEN often spend a lifetime without reward. More money has been put into gold mines and gold hunting than has ever been taken out. But even the oldest prospector never looks discouraged. Hope is back of the sun-burned face and gray beard, and fortune is always just ahead. You need not feel sorry for him. Trying is the only thing in life worth while; possession is nothing. And he is trying, and full of hope.

A young gentleman spending his dead father's money in a fashionable gambling house might well envy the old prospector seeking a "grub stake" for just one more trip.

THE MULTITUDE of seekers will find gold, undoubtedly, for it is everywhere in this western country. Some by a blow with a hammer, might uncover wealth literally beyond the dreams of avarice, although water power, rich soil and oil have long since superseded gold in the public imagination.

Uncle Sam, himself, may add to Europe's indignation by discovering his old gold mines in the deep digging made necessary by the Boulder Dam enterprise. Innumerable tunnels must be made through the hills, and, as Harry Carr suggests:

"All these hills have been scratched by prospectors for many years, but few have been dug into."

Uncle Sam, digging deep, may discover new bonanzas. President Hoover, able engineer, will surely send young mining engineers with the diggers.

IF YOU come out here and go prospecting you probably will find no gold, but you will find something better—health and knowledge of your country. Young men out of college next spring might invest $150 in three donkeys and an outfit, bring a book on minerology, a friend and advice which the government will gladly supply. In a few weeks of gold hunting, they might learn, in contact with the earth and with poor men, things that are not taught in college.

NO TROUBLE, as the late Senator Hearst said, in knowing when you have found gold.

"If you think it is gold, it is probably pyrites, if it is gold, you will not think, you will know it."

He found the Homestake gold mine, the Anaconda copper mine and other properties from which hundreds of millions of dollars have been taken. But don't come here expecting to get rich. You will not do that.

NOT MUCH room left for news, but in the desert that seems unimportant. It is all so far away. You read that a former United States senator and governor of New Jersey has killed himself, having some time since, in an election, promised "to make New Jersey as wet as the Atlantic Ocean," and you feel sorry for him. But when it is over, what does it matter.

IF YOU HAVE reached 50, you probably have more intimate friends dead than alive. They were so intensely alive, and now they are so completely dead, whether they surprised the world with their genius, bilked it with their money, or "also ran," living and dying unknown. Is there a place, in Einstein's, Jean's and Eddington's universe, in which they meet and talk it over? Or is it true that "the rest is silence."

THE FORMER KAISER reached his seventy-second birthday today. He has seen both sides of the shield of fate. The writer saw him for the first time at Mentone, long ago. His grandfather William was alive then, and Sir Morell Mackenzie was operating on his father's throat, to keep him alive, that his wife, daughter of Queen Victoria, might become widow of the Emperor Frederick, not merely widow of a Prussian crown prince. She did become empress and dowager with dignity and a big income.

NEXT, THE young Hohenzollern was seen riding in the jubilee procession of his grandmothers' Victoria. He was dressed in pure white; his well-trained charger was magnificent. He outshone the whole parade. Now he is an old man, in exile, sawing wood, for exercise. He had much of the will power of his ancestor, the great Frederick, and could have been Overcome by smoke in the bedroom of his home, at 1023 Rebecca avenue, Wilkinsburg, when the dwelling was swept by fire early today, Fred Angner, 58, was dragged through a second-floor window to a porch roof and rescued by two milkmen. Mrs. Annie Angner, 40, the victim's wife, and Marie, 18, a daughter, made their own way to the porch roof where they were rescued by Wilkinsburg firemen.

Michael Burkovitz, 27, and his helper, Pete Cymbala, 17, both of 2606 Braddock avenue, Swissvale, were delivering milk nearby.

The men heard screams and saw the daughter on the porch

CASH BONUS OPPOSED BY MELLON

Couzens Challenges Secretary On Statement Payment Would Retard Business

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Complete disorganization of the government and other security markets, with serious consequences not only to the public credit, but the entire economic structure of the United States, would result from the flotation of $3,400,000,000 in bonds necessary to finance cash payment of the face value of veterans' adjusted service certificates, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon told the Senate Finance Committee today.

Mellon appeared at a hearing on bills proposing payment of the bonus immediately as a means toward stimulation of business and relief of veterans out of work.

HARRISON FOR PLAN

Within a few minutes after Mr. Mellon had expressed his views, however, the assertion was made by Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, a Democratic member of the Finance Committee, that a majority of the committee favors some form of cash payment on the bonus insurance certificates. He declared in favor of cash payment of the present face value of the certificates.

Before Mr. Mellon started, Under Secretary Mills read correspondence between the Treasury secretary and Senator Vandenberg, (Rep.), of Michigan, in

BABCOCK WON'T RUN AGAIN

County Commissioner E. V. Babcock will not be a candidate for re-election, authoritative friends of the millionaire lumberman let it be known today.

The press of his private business was given as the reason.

Babcock was elected to the board in 1927 as running mate to Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong after having been appointed to the board six years ago to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Addison C. Gumbert.

Armstrong yesterday announced, during a tiff with Minority Commissioner C. C. McGovern, that he would be a candidate for re-election.

STOCK TOTAL BAN UPSETS LOTTERY

Numbers Ring Seeking New Gamble; Market Stops Complete Figures Today

There will be no "numbers" play today, the first time since the racket started.

The New York Stock Exchange indirectly closed pools throughout the country by its announcement that the total daily sales figure would be published in round numbers, beginning today.

The announcement was as follows:

"Beginning Wednesday, January 28, 1931, the total volume of stock transactions on the New York Stock Exchange will be reported to the nearest hundred thousand."

BOOKING CONTINUES

This means that, should the total sale of shares be 1,456,918, the total released for publication would be 1,500,000, a figure impossible for lottery purposes.

Operators continued to book plays on the stock exchange number, hoping that the total would be published in spite of the announcement that the change was effective today.

One big operator said three or four of the larger pools may get together and throw dice, all using the same number.

FRENZIED PARLEYS

The announcement brought the operators, slowly recovering from the setback received when the New York Clearing House stopped publication January 1 of its daily summaries, into frenzied conference late last night. No new number was available, they said. One of the biggest operators predicted:

"We won't use the United States Treasury figures, that's sure. Why, they're out three days before they're published. The Stock Exchange number was all right; we had bad luck with doubles for a while, but six-way numbers would have made up for that in the long run."

'Roxy' Leaves Broadway, Takes 'Gang' on Tour

He and his "gang" and Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink are going on a two months' tour and when they return Roxy's resignation as manager of the theater that bears his nickname will have become effective. His contract ends March 29. The directors announced his resignation yesterday.

Just what he is going to do upon his return he has not yet said, but it is believed along Broadway that he is to be entertainment director of the radio and amusement center, "Rockefeller City," planned by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and the Radio Corporation of America on a large Fifth avenue site.

No man of his generation has stamped his personality more clearly on Broadway than has Roxy. He came to the Gay White Way less than 20 years ago, a young man whose experience had consisted in managing rather unpretentious motion picture theaters in Pennsylvania, Minnesota and uptown Manhattan.

The story is that he started his career as manager of a nickel movie house in Forest City, Pa., with movable chairs and a seating capacity of 250.

Roxy glorified stage shows in movie theaters. He brought classical music to Broadway—and "made 'em like it." Classical music and classical dancing, not for the erudite few, but for the great mass of movie fans.

PAT O'MALLEY AND HIS BRIDE, THE FORMER MISS MILDRED HENRY, LEAVING CHURCH

PAT O'MALLEY TAKES BRIDE

Pat O'Malley, one of the town's most prominent bachelors, took unto himself a bride today.

Pat and Miss Mildred Henry, of 350 Melwood avenue, were married in Old St. Patrick's Church in the Strip, that district where the young Irishman was born and reared and has fought a dozen political battles.

Political notables, headed by Mayor Charles H. Kline, saw Father James R. Cox unite the couple, and 500 O'Malley admirers stood outside the church.

Mounted and foot police kept the crowd in check.

Pat was dapper in a blue suit, dark topcoat, a derby and a carnation. The bride was attractive in a dress of eggshell linen lace, a hat to match and white shoes. Her bouquet was of lilies. The bridesmaid was Margaret Henry, the bride's sister, and the best man was Tom O'Malley, Pat's brother.

Besides Mayor Kline there were Councilman John S. Herron and W. Y. English, State Senator James J. Coyne, Public Works Director Edward G. Lang, Attorney Edward G. Coll, Howard Neely, chairman of the Fourth Ward; Police Inspectors James N. Hoey and Albert Beebe and Magistrate James O'Connor.

RELIEF LEAD BY SENATE PROMISED

Payne's Refusal to Accept $25,000,000 Federal Fund Rouses Wrath of Congress

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Responding to a statement by Chairman Payne, of the Red Cross, that his organization will not accept government relief funds, Democratic Leader Robinson said in the Senate today Congress will set up its own agencies for distribution of relief funds.

The statement by Judge Payne was in testimony today before the House Appropriations Committee hearing on the Senate's $25,000,000 appropriation for the Red Cross. The chairman revealed the central committee of the relief organization had voted unanimously against acceptance.

Robinson said:

"If the Red Cross refuses to measure up to the proper standard in this emergency and refuses to respond to the ordinary impulses that move human hearts, Congress will find its own agencies for distribution of such funds as it feels should be used in the emergency."

"NO RELIEF"

"The action of the President and the Red Cross implies that there shall be no general measure of relief for unemployment, no matter how long it lasts or how great it becomes."

He called on all Senators who have even an "ordinary" regard for the suffering to "repudiate the policy which implies a refusal on the part of those responsible to the people as a whole to take any action whatever to relieve the distress," adding:

"We all know that $10,000,000 will not be adequate to meet the requirements."

Voicing the threat of an extra session if necessary, Robinson said:

"More important than the general appropriation bills is

Alma Rubens' Story Starts Friday in Sun-Telegraph

Just before death cut short her valiant but losing battle to conquer dope and to come back in the movies, Alma Rubens wrote down the story of her life. This dramatic autobiography will appear in the Sun-Telegraph, beginning Friday.

Miss Rubens tells of her humble childhood, of her early aspirations to stage fame, of her first appearance on the boards as a chorus girl in a burlesque show. She tells of her sudden rise to movie stardom, of her experiences with the notables of Hollywood, of her brief period of dazzling success and happiness.

She tells how she evaded the many pitfalls awaiting her on the road to popularity and fortune, only to fall a victim to the greatest of all curses—dope. And she tells at last of her pitiful struggle to overcome this curse and to regain her place as one of the brightest stars in the motion picture firmament.

Every installment of Alma Rubens' own story of her life will be found of absorbing interest. It is a surprising story, full of ranges from humor to pathos, from breathless drama to deep tragedy. Don't fail to read it in the Sun-Telegraph, beginning Friday.

FUGITIVE FOUND SANE, FREED

George Venares, of Vandergrift, who had cowered in the shadow of the law since his escape 20 years ago from the County Home at Woodville, was back with his family today following the order of Judge George V. Moore in Criminal Court yesterday which made him a free man.

Tried for murder in 1911, Venares was found not guilty by reason of insanity. Because of his mental condition he was sent to the County Home, from which he escaped shortly after being admitted.

He remained at liberty until January 16, 1931, when he was arrested for assault and battery in the South Hills.

Members of the commission, Drs. Edward E. Mayer and C. H. Henninger, in their report to the court, said that Venares had recovered his sanity.

CLARA'S HOME UNDER GUARD

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 28.—(INS.)—Friends close to Clara Bow, motion picture star, today indicated that the present guard will be maintained about the screen star's Beverly Hills home until she leaves for a three weeks' rest.

The guard was doubled last night after Miss Bow had received death threats in letters which commented on the trial of Daisy De Voe, the screen star's former secretary, who was convicted of a charge of embezzling $825 from the actress.

Following the threats it was feared that one of the writers might break into Miss Bow's home where she is convalescing from a serious cold.

Meanwhile William Bierne, attorney for Miss De Voe, was perusing all evidence in the embezzlement case in preparation for arguments on his motion for a new trial, which will be heard Monday, February 2.

'Red' Lewis, Literary Terror, Coos Over Baby

WON'T REPLY TO CRITICS' BARBS

Noted Writer Interviews Interviewer in London, Slyly Foils Questioner

LONDON, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—Harry S. Lewis, once America's most-fired reporter, but more recently Sinclair Lewis, winner of the Nobel Prize in literature, arrived here today preparatory to completing several short stories and launching a novel.

The Nobel Prize winner, accompanied by Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of the Nation, came from Berlin, where Mrs. Lewis remained to do some work.

In response to a query, Lewis said:

"No, I shall not answer American critics when I return to the United States. I have had enough. I must get to work. I have a farm near the Coolidges, so I can't quarrel with the neighbors. Have you seen the kid's picture? A great kid, this Mickey!"

ENTHUSES OVER SON

His son is seven months old. Lewis was asked:

"Is American literature heading for the high plane occupied by European literature?"

He replied:

"Well, that's something else, but have you seen my kid?"

It was a case of interviewed querying interviewer. Under the newspaperman's nose Lewis shoved a picture of a charming baby and a wriggling cat. He enthused:

"Sweetest kid in America. Just look at those eyes. Ain't he sweet?"

'RED TERROR' COOING

The interviewer was treated to the spectacle of the raging, rampant "Red" Lewis, terror of Conformists the world over, giggling and cooing at the picture of his child. This was "Red" Lewis—not Elmer Gantry fulminating from his pulpit, not Babbitt, nor Arrowsmith, nor Dodsworth, not the man who knew Coolidge—but "Red" Lewis from Sauk Center, Minn., who started his hard-boiled career 30 years ago by stealing his brother's pistol and selling it to buy candy for his pals.

When he arrived at his hotel he was handed a bushel of letters, clippings and cablegrams. Picking up the collection "Red" snorted, lit a cigaret, and said:

roof, preparing to jump. They shouted:

"Don't jump! Wait!"

Burkovitz sent Cymbala to a nearby fire box to summon help, then he crawled up the porch post. He crawled through the window and into the house. Angner collapsed from smoke as Burkovitz reached his side, but the milkman dragged him outside.

Fire Chief William Thomson, of the Wilkinsburg department, estimated the damage at $4,000.

The fire is believed to have originated in a one-story addition to the two-story frame dwelling. The addition is used as a confectionery store conducted by the Angner family.

Edward A. Costello, state fire warden for Western Pennsylvania, today started an investigation into the cause of a forest and brush fire which swept several acres of the grounds of the Sewickley Hunt Club, compromising parts of the Bushman and Field estates, near Sewickley, yesterday. Two men were injured and two others were overcome by smoke while combating the blaze, Costello said.

Downtown firemen were called out early today to extinguish a small fire in the basement of Childs' restaurant at 937 Liberty avenue.

DO-X TUNES UP FOR RIO HOP

LISBON, Portugal, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—The Do-X, giant German seaplane, made a trial flight this forenoon in preparation for take-off tomorrow on a trans-Atlantic flight to Rio De Janeiro, Brazil.

The flight was a complete success and proved the efficiency of recent repairs to one of the wings which was burned several weeks ago after the ship came here from Altenrhein.

The idea of the trial was to see how the 12 American motors would function with a maximum load of 26 tons fuel to accommodate which all furniture, carpets and other ornaments were taken off the ship.

Capt. Christiansen said the ship's course would be by way of Madeira, Cape Verde, the Canary Islands and Natal. Stops en route for fueling are planned.

IL DUCE HEADS PLAY CENSORS

ROME, Jan. 28.—(AP.)—A national censorship of the theater has gone into effect in Italy with the passage of a bill presented by Mussolini, as minister of the interior.

The bill consolidates into the hands of the ministry at Rome the censoring powers hitherto confided to the prefects of the various provinces. It names a special board of censors, headed by Mussolini himself.

The bill probably will be welcomed by producers.

The national board of censors will not be called upon to repress any decided trend toward loose morals. The Italian stage is all told, pretty unobstreperous.

DUCE IRATE OVER TALK BY MARINE

Premier Cables Protest on General's Charge of 'War Dog,' Hit-Run Driving

By EARL L. SHAUB.
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—A cabled protest from Premier Mussolini to the Italian ambassador today had intensified the international flare-up started by Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, the veteran Marine officer, who is quoted as saying Mussolini ran over a child and told his chauffeur to drive on with the remark:

"What is one life in the affairs of a state?"

DENIES CHARGES

Mussolini, in demanding through his embassy here that amends be made, cabled this message:

"I have never taken an American on a motor car trip around Italy, neither have I ever run over child, man or woman."

DEPARTMENTS ACTIVE

Both State and Navy departments were active today to learn the truth of the general's remarks and to take the necessary steps to soothe the ruffled feelings of the Italian officials.

The incident caused a flurry of excitement in official circles after Ambassador Nobile Giacomo de Martino filed a protest with the State Department and received assurance from Secretary Stimson that a thorough investigation would be made.

BUTLER QUERIED

Secretary Stimson telephoned to Secretary of the Navy Adams, who immediately wrote to Gen. Butler asking him if he had made the remarks attributed to him, and if not, to let the department know just what he had said.

MAY ASK APOLOGY

It is not known what disciplinary steps will be taken if Secretary Adams finds Butler to be wrong, but it was intimated in navy circles that the General, who is the only American to hold two congressional medals of honor, may be called upon to make a public apology.

Gen. Butler was at Quantico, Va., today in charge of the marine base there and declined to make any comment until he has submitted his official report.

MELLON HOST TO HOOVERS

11 FLEE REFORM SCHOOL IN RIOT

ANNANDALE, N. J., Jan. 28.—(AP.)—State police sought 11 boys today who escaped from the Annandale Reformatory during a free-for-all fight in which 15 were injured.

Between 50 and 60 inmates, from 15 to 24 years, engaged in the fight, which occurred during study hour last night in a cottage.

The boys fought through the buildings breaking doors and windows, throwing bricks and chairs.

Four guards, unarmed, were helpless against the rioters, and sent for state police.

After the fight the boys ran out of the cottage. All but 11 of them were rounded up by the state police.

The disturbance is the second in recent months. During a fight on the baseball diamond last fall three boys escaped. All were recaptured. Reformatory officials said racial antagonisms were behind the outbreaks.

GIRL NOVELIST FILM STAR

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 28.—(AP.)—An 18-year-old girl today found herself snatched from her typewriter and placed into the spotlight of movie stardom.

Carmen Barnes, heroine of this newest Hollywood Cinderella story, came to Paramount-Publix studios here after three novels written by her had been purchased for filming. She came under a six weeks' contract as a writer. Today she signed a new contract calling for her services not at the typewriter, but as a full fledged movie star. Her first picture will be billed Carmen Barnes in 'A Debutante Confesses' by Carmen Barnes."

Miss Barnes is from Chattanooga, Tenn., daughter of Wellington Barnes, a manufacturer, and Dianatha Barnes, who writes poetry under the name of Dianatha Mills.

At 15 she wrote her first novel, "School Girl," and two years later published "Beau Lover" on her eighteenth birthday. "School Girl" opened as a play on Broadway. "A Debutante Confession" is adapted from her third novel.

A low, centered over the Upper Mississippi Valley, caused a rise in temperature over the western plains and northward over the Canadian Northwest.

500 LECTURED ON FIRE PERIL

Statements were made at a conference of fire officials of the western central district, the attorneys of the underwriters, W. W. Haviland, chief engineer of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, New York, declared at the third fire school of the Chamber of Commerce last night. Frank S. Kaufmann, a member of the school committee, presided. Following the address an open forum was held.

Hosted and endorsed by an audience of 500, all of whom were men whose duties hold them responsible to the management of industrial plants, business offices and schools, to notify the fire department at once when they discover fire. Delay in sending in an alarm, regardless of the size of the fire, may be costly not only to the firm but the community and its residents as well, he said in part.

"Business men today are realizing the costliness of fire, and are doing everything possible in the matter of protection and in the education of the public in precautionary measures against fire, in order to keep down America's fire loss which, after all, is paid by Americans when they purchase commodities over any store counter."

The Entire Sample Displays of Twelve of the Country's Leading Manufacturers From the National Glass and China Show

Tomorrow thousands of pieces which set the fashions in glassware, china and pottery for the coming year at the Annual Exhibit held last week in the William Penn and Fort Pitt Hotels will go on sale at prices which equal, in most cases, the customary wholesale prices.

These are the samples that constituted the most unusual and admired displays in the entire exhibit. The new designs, the different colorings, the original shapes which made their first appearance at this show will be here tomorrow for you to see . . . and to own.

With such a tremendous selection . . . and no two pieces alike . . . it is obviously impossible to describe them, so come tomorrow to the most elaborate display of glass, china and pottery you've ever seen.

It is the opportunity of the year to add charming accessories to your home at trifling cost . . . to select wedding presents, gifts and prizes different from all others. Duplicates of this merchandise, even though ordered last week, won't make an appearance in this vicinity for at least thirty to ninety days.

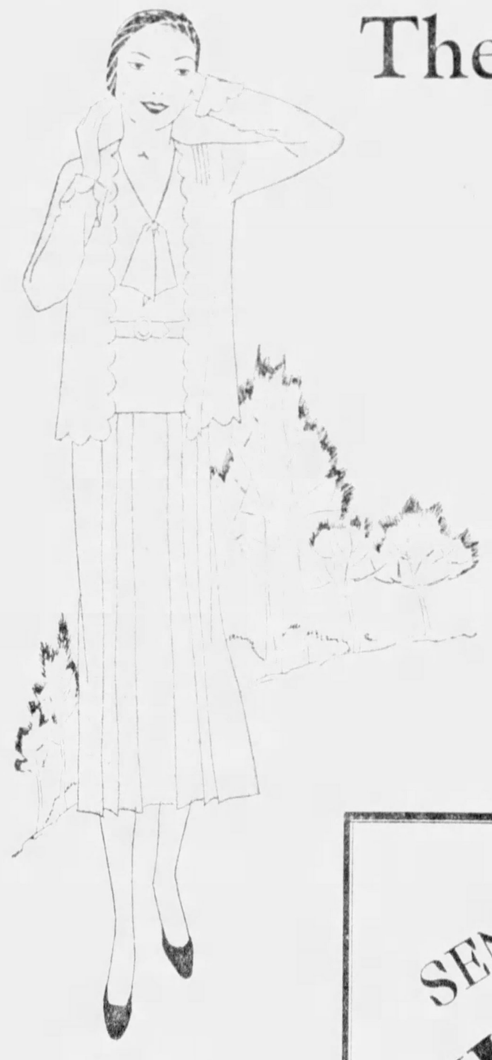
The Jacket Theme

In Women's New Tailor-Types



The principle of smart simplicity that identifies Tailor-Type dresses, certainly lends itself to the all-pervading jacket idea, and we have made the most of it in new showings that suggest spring.

This theme runs through women's Tailor-Types of solid-color silk crepes, printed crepes and sheer woolens. With jackets ranging from the most youthful boleros, to finger-tip jackets. With long-sleeved or short-sleeved dresses, and with blouses of silk or the distracting, new heavy linen laces.

See them tomorrow, if only to get a hint of how far the jacket idea is to be carried this spring.

We Chose the Furniture

But Conditions Made the Values

Furniture prices have reached the point of low ebb, where the most casual observer will be ready to admit prices can hardly go lower, and most likely will go higher at any time. National statistics show furniture prices at approximately 21% below those of a year ago, which had set a previous low figure.

The furniture market, together with the February Sale discounts are, therefore, responsible for the incredibly low figures which are found on February price tickets. But for the quality, designs and unusually lovely varieties, we take full credit and responsibility. Better furniture at lower prices is the keynote of this sale, but comfort, luxury and decorative charm have been stressed in every selection.

Advance Inspection This Week

You need not wait until February to learn the facts of the February Sale. Advance inspection and selection are permitted now, subject to charge and delivery on or after February 2nd.

CHARGES WIFE LEFT HIM FOR MORE GAIETY

She Resented Rural Life, Husband Says in Suit; 13 Others Seeking Divorces

His wife liked gaiety too well to stand living in the country, Edward N. Kremer, 207 South Highland avenue, testified in his suit for divorce from Mrs. Edna Kremer, 1015 Galveston avenue, North Side, before Judge James H. Gray, in Common Pleas Court. He declared:

"Soon after we went to live in the country near New Kensington, she began staying out all night two or three times a week, drinking and smoking cigarets with other men. When I asked her what she meant by her actions she replied:

"'What's the use of living if I can't have some fun.'"

The couple had lived in Pittsburgh about a year after their marriage, June 11, 1927. Soon after they moved to the rural districts the wife left on August 6, 1928.

HUSBAND GONE 12 YEARS

Mrs. Marion Allen, 205 Atwood street, declared before Judge Gray that her husband, Harry Allen, beat her when she wanted time to think about giving up her position and moving suddenly to Woodville, O., where he had obtained a job as a structural iron worker. He left without it her 12 years ago, and she has not seen him since, she said.

Mrs. Anna Wesener, 308 West North avenue, has filed a bill of particulars in her divorce suit in Common Pleas Court against Herman Wesener, of Nemacolin, charging he threatened to kill her with an ax. At other times he kicked and abused her, she said.

11 SUITS ON FILE

Eleven other divorce suits were on file today in Common Pleas Court.

Mrs. Elizabeth Vorndran, 56 Ruth street, sued Charles Vorndran, 47 Haberman avenue, charging cruelty. They were married December 9, 1923.

Robert T. Muldowney, 320 Boquet street, sued Emma A. Muldowney, 529 Farnsworth street, charging desertion. They were married August 16, 1927, and parted December 25, 1927.

Mrs. Hilda E. Stoops, 912 Sandusky street, charged desertion against Frederick Stoops. They were married March 6, 1929, and parted two months later.

MAN CHARGES CRUELTY

Joseph A. Jenkins, 2325 Perrysville avenue, charged Bertha L. Jenkins, Los Angeles, with cruelty. They were married May 9, 1908.

Mrs. Anna B. Nelson, 34 Browns place, charged cruelty against Edward Nelson, Homestead. They were married June 15, 1920.

Mrs. Alma May Matthews, 78 May street, Castle Shannon, sued James T. Matthews, Turtle Creek, on grounds of cruelty. They were married September 4, 1929.

Mrs. Alvera J. Lovell, Long Run road, North Versailles Township, charged desertion against Joseph Lovell, North Versailles Township. They were married August 3, 1928, and parted six weeks later, September 17, 1928.

SUES TEXAS MAN

Mrs. Mary K. Ritchey, 7528 Bennett street, sued Earl Ritchey, Hamlin, Tex., on grounds of desertion. They were married May 29, 1921, and parted December 23, 1924.

Mrs. Mary Taber, 6017 Kentucky avenue, charged desertion against Frank R. Taber, Washington avenue, Braddock. They were married November 23, 1923, and separated February 16, 1927.

Mrs. Jean Miller, 6415 Land View avenue, sued John Miller, Saline avenue, charging cruelty. They were married February 20, 1926.

Mrs. Ann M. Bloomberg, 4048 Cranbronne street, charged desertion against Russel C. Bloomberg, Milwaukee, Wis. They were married August 20, 1921, and parted February 26, 1927.

ACTORS OF 'NEW MOON' ON RADIO

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

Evelyn Herbert and Robert Halliday sing their famous duet, "Lover, Come Back to Me," from "The New Moon," on WCAE at 8:30 tonight. "Riff Song," from "The Desert Song," is a solo by Mr. Halliday in his radio debut. In duet again the pair are to present gems from "Sweethearts."

* * *

Congratulations to M. Aylesworth & Co. for presenting Edna St. Vincent Millay over KDKA at 10:45 tonight. It's a new series featuring modern poets.

* * *

* * *

His song service on the WEAF-WCAE hookup every Wednesday and Saturday night has been judged good enough to "buck" Amos 'n' Andy. We think his time should be increased 30 minutes. Hear him tonight at 7.

* * *

If you concur with Henley's "I am the master of my fate; I am the captain of my soul," or if you appreciate Bruno Huhn's "Invictus" well sung, tune WJAS at 6:30 tonight for John K. Gibalofsky.

* * *

QUESTION A DAY:

Does a radio singer's voice go on the air exactly as it is heard in the studio?—Ethel W., Charleroi.

Answer—No. The voice is modulated at a control board. Temperamental artists sometimes object to radio because they feel this system of modulation distorts quality and tone. A small indicator like the speedometer on an automobile, registers the perfect voice at "30." When a singer "hits 60" the control operators tears his hair. It's the breaking point for voice. Few voices sound the same over the air as in the studio.

* * *

Frederick G. Rodgers has been commuting twice a week between here and New York to make an electrical transcription with Ruth Etting and Nathaniel Shilkret for a special KDKA broadcast on Tuesday, March 3.

* * *

Ed Lowry not only resembles the "Idol of Paris," but he sings in perfect imitation—particularly he has that laugh down pat as we learned on KDKA the other night.

* * *

In Europe they never give the announcer's name. Instead they have a special "greeter" for each station whose duty it is to wax warm on colorful adjectives. We get our first taste of this system on WJAS tomorrow morning at 10:45, when Columbia picks up a beauty talk direct from Paris.

* * *

Will Rogers entertains in behalf of the Red Cross Relief Fund over WJAS this Saturday night at 10 o'clock in a special program originating at WACO in Waco, Texas. It will replace Hank Simmons' Show Boat.

* * *

Gen. John J. Pershing, whose war memoirs appear daily in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, makes a Red Cross appeal on WJAS and the Columbia network Friday night at 8:15.

* * *

Using the very desk on which President Abraham Lincoln wrote his messages, President Hoover speaks over WEAF-WCAE the evening of February 12.

NEW GULF OIL PLANT OPENS

The Gulf Oil Corporation's new refinery in Neville Island, built to serve a territory within 100 miles of Pittsburgh, was opened yesterday. It was completed Monday, having been built within a period of about five months. More than 1,000 men were employed on the project.

The refinery receives crude oil from Oklahoma fields through a recently completed pipe line. Its completion marks the first step in a $60,000,000 building program inaugurated by the Gulf company last summer.

Church Raises $4,000 For Endowment

The Bellevue Christian Church raised approximately $4,000 in cash and pledges Sunday toward an $8,000,000 fund throughout the churches of the Disciples of Christ to make operative a pension system for ministers, missionaries and instructors in seminaries and colleges of the brotherhood. An additional $1,000 is to be raised by the Bellevue church, to complete its quota.

The LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—The churches of America have yet to follow the Church of England in giving offici.' blessing, much less official recognition, to the broadcasting of church services over the radio. It may come any day now.

Moreover, our churchmen may be just as benign as the English bishops and like them, solemnly draw up a resolution urging the clergy to "observe the high standard set by radio programs and try to emulate them."

However, I doubt if they will go so far as to state, as did the English bishops, that "there was no evidence that people sat in comfortable chairs and smoked their pipes, failing to display reverent attention while listening to radio sermons."

* * *

Churches are paying more and more attention to radio in America but no church program is yet regarded by the broadcasters as drawing an audience to the degree that is true of a half dozen so-called entertainment hours.

Today there are not 10 church programs on the networks. That presided over by S. Parkes Cadman, is believed to have the largest following. Other religious programs heard regularly throughout the country are those conducted by Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, Dr. Daniel A. Poling, Rev. Donald Grey Barnhouse in Philadelphia, the Catholic Hour, Rev. Charles Coughlin from Detroit, the Lutheran Hour and the services which are aired from the Churchill Tabernacle in Buffalo.

* * *

Though religious services occupy a small percentage of broadcasting time the clergy are alert to the drawing power of radio. Loudspeaker systems are being installed in churches throughout the land and radio programs are being offered as a means of increasing attendance. A church in Northfield, Mass., has incorporated the broadcast of the Roxy Sunday morning symphony concert into its services, marking the first time, it is said, that a church in the Eastern section of the country has brought in music through the radio as a part of its Sunday service.

* * *

The majority of clergymen who take to the air have succeeded in abandoning a solemn and sepulchral tone in their broadcasts. In the early days of radio it was the fashion for every voice from the pulpit to be solemn and sepulchral. The preachers today are microphone-wise. They speak in natural conversational tones. They tell anecdotes. They talk occasionally on current topics, and they are increasing their audiences in the rocking-chairs.

Will Rogers, as might be expected, is also on the scene with his bean-shooter. In his return to the microphones, he would be, he said, "light and frothy; I will read the Wickersham report."

The Napoleons of the networks have finally found a select place in the radio sun for Willard Robison. Strange they delayed so long. For months the foremost exponent on the air of the haunting chants and spirituals of the Southwestern Negro has been buried in a commercial program. He had to bide his time while broadcasters hunted down so-called guest stars they believed necessary to the success of the program.

'AD' MEN HEAR WORK LAUDED

Speaking on "Who Profits Most from Advertising?" Ben J. Sweetland, New York, yesterday told members of the Pittsburgh Advertising Club that advertising has made the working man the peer of the aristocrat and plutocrat of a few years ago, and given him luxuries and comforts which even princes did not have. The address was the second arranged by the Advertising Federation of America for the Pittsburgh club in a series on "The Truth About Advertising." Sweetland said in part:

"Advertising is essentially educational. It lifts men's minds out of ruts and creates a desire for finer things. It spurs ambition and generates energy. It has walked hand in hand with progress in our time, and even a step ahead."

WALTER WINCHELL
On Broadway

Stevedore

He slouches with cat ease along the dock,
His rags a symphony of grease and dirt;
His torso gleaming black through open shirt;
His face deep pitted with the scars of pock,
His muscled feet uncramped by shoe or sock,
A leather belt about his middle girt,
His densely growing hair a kinky shock.

A ribald joke, a gusty laugh, a grin,
He heaves the bales and crates with body rhyme,
Rejoicing when Fate flings an extra dime;
He knows where it will buy a gulp of gin,
Through life he loiters, hand in hand with Sin,
Haunted by visions of another clime;
The jungle village, and the tom-tom's din.

Dime Novel Stuff

The wild machinations of most New York editors and their staffs have kept Elsa comer in stitches for years. Take the tete-a-tete on the Club Abbey shoot-'em. All the stories told of The Wise Guy Corner are "The Corner for the Privileged," where the damage was double etc. As a matter of repertorial accuracy, the leaders who disturbed the peace of the place were bunched at a far-off corner at the extreme rear, where the management usually seats drunks, noisy clunks, unimportant patrons, and those who spend nothing.

The Wiseguy Corner of the Corner for the Privileged is that part of the Club Abbey where the head waiter stands and greets customers the one nearest the door.

That corner it strikes us should be known as "The Corner for the Privileged?" considering that those who sit there are privileged to escape from trouble quicker than you, you, you and even you!

Incidentally

Then there's the gag about the little dialectician who was asking up Broadway wearing an Army officer's trench coat.

"Hey, what's the idear wearing that trench coat?" growled a heckler. "You weren't in any war."

"I know," was the reply, "but I was in all the shootings around Fifty-fourth street!"

"No More Worryin' "

Jimmy Mullens, the bass fiddle player of Fred Waring's Pennsylvania crew appearing in "The New Yorkers" show, got his notice the other day. He felt pretty glum about it.

"Don't worry about getting another job," one of the kids comforted, "worry never helps any. You never know what'll happen. Jimmy. Tomorrow is far away."

Jimmy was killed that night in a motor smash.

Nifty

Fred Allen observes that on Broadway a guy doesn't have to order a fruit salad to get the raspberry.

Or in Boston?

Gag

Phil Baker, who began headlining at the Palace for a month the other day, tells us the one about the Delancey Streeters who got a break and moved hoptown hon. Riwersite Drife!

Mrs. Mefoofsky gave a housewarming to her ritzy friends in the apartment building. But Mr. Mefoofsky's table manners being what they were, she made him hide in the kitchen during the party. At intervals she sent him some food.

Finnif having set in, Mr. Mefoofsky called out:

"Let you dun't horry opp and sand in murr herring—I'll appear!"

They tell of the young comedian who was in love with a well known Ziegfeld comedienne last year. The romance was the talk of the Stem, and then the lass decided to call it off. She wasted no time. She didn't think they could be completely happy married, so she up and told him. So few Broadway girls do it that way. They haven't the courage.

A few weeks ago the comic produced a show. He engaged his former sweetheart for a prominent part in it. During the tryout stages it was decided that she did not fit the role. Not that she was incapable. She just wasn't the type, you know. And he had to fire her.

But he gave her something she didn't give him.

A two weeks' notice.

In Case You Didn't Know

The mail recently has been choked with inquiries about the Messrs. Clayton, Jackson & Durante, the chief query being:

"What are the nationalities of those fellows?"

Eddie Jackson, who looks Italian, is Joosh, as is Lou Clayton. Jimmy Durante, who looks Joosh, is one of Mussolini's little boys.

Add Similes

She was colder than a fried egg sandwich the bellboy went for. Retlaw Chellwyn . . . As abundant as the sweat drops in a comic strip—Robert Knight.

As unpremeditated as a sneeze as unrehearsed as an accident—Chas. G. Shaw.

Haw!

On Forty-fifth street west of the Canyon there is a basement dance hall which caters to cake-eaters and their short-skirted flames. It advertises, among other things, an orchestra which bills itself in this manner:

"The Band That Refused to Play for the King and Queen!"

Reason Enough

"Do you know," said a first-nighter, "why I never applaud at a show?"

"I give it up," said his listener. "Why don't you applaud?"

"Because when I don't like a show they won't let me hiss."

Wisey

One of the flip cracks written on the walls of an undressing room at the Palace is:

"A guy who would cheat at solitaire would take bows after the lights went out!"

Vengeance

According to Mr. George Jean Nathan in Vanity Fair, the late Nat Goodwin never slapped a critic's face or challenged one to combat or made remarks about those who belittled him in print. In Goodwin's autobiography, says Mr. Nathan, the actor went so far as to paste the photographs of two of his critics on as many spittoons and to note that the latter were "always in constant use."

The Retort Lovely

An aggrieved actor, who set out to embarrass an unfriendly dramatic critic said:

"Very well then, smart aleck. If you had the role how would you have played it?"

"Under an assumed name!" was the squelch swelegant.

WE STARE AND GASP AT BOLSHEVIK DRAMA IN Y PLAYHOUSE

By GEORGE SEIBEL

George Seibel

Those Bolsheviks certainly are precocious infants, judging by their dramatic literature a specimen of which was on exhibition at the Y Playhouse in Bellefield avenue last night. "Credentials" is the title of the play; Nikolas Erdman is the name of the author; Boris S. Glagolin was the producer.

To review this production really requires the heroic valor of Hamilton Fish or some other say-so-ist capitalist society.

As you look at the stage you wonder whether you are not at the fair of Nijni Novgorod. There is a merry-go-round in the center, with Rasputin, Lenin and other eminent Russians taking a ride on the flying horses. Above and behind this carousel loom the bulbous towers of Holy Moscow. Right and left is a panoramic map of Soviet Russia.

The Moscow River, two feet across, flows from the flies to the footlights, rushes along the front of the stage through a trough of real water, and up on the other side till it loses itself in the clouds of the Ural Mountains.

The Carousel turns around at the beginning of each episode, showing the interior scene of various abodes. The properties and furniture are brought on by the Unemployed of Moscow.

ON WITH THE PLAY

These preliminaries being disposed of, and Hamilton Fish in the jury-box, let the play begin.

After a few episodes one becomes aware of the existence of a plot. It's all about a dress and a trunk, and an old general and membership in the Communist party. Every time you think you've got hold of the plot by its tail, there is an interlude and some folk dances.

Forgetting all about the plot, if any, we admire the folk dances, which have been admirably put on by Mme. Suzanne Karpova. The children's pantomime directed by Genevieve Jones and the folk songs in charge of Harvey Efimove are also very effective.

But let us return to that play written by this Erdman.

Judging by internal evidence, Erdman was born in the year of the revolution and is now about 11 years of age.

His drama has the exquisite profundity of a Punch and Judy show—and as such it is played.

No American youngster of 11 could write anything quite so complex and symbolic. It is almost sophomoric—perhaps a new word ought to be coined—sophomoronic.

It is a satire, we are assured by the program. If so, it is a satire upon dramatic art.

Boris Glagolin, with the aid of Frank Stout, who built the Constructivist scenery, has made us stare and gasp. He has made the ambitious young people of the Playhouse perspire in their efforts to simulate the anatomy and vocalization of puppets.

If this is the art of the proletariat, we'll vote for Otto Kahn and J. P. Morgan as soon as Hamilton Fish sets up the dictatorship of the plutocracy.

NOTES ABOUT COMING AND CURRENT SHOWS

Henry Whittemore, who plays the heavy role in George White's musical comedy, "Flying High," opening in the Alvin for one week's engagement next Monday, can divide his career into three parts. Once he thrilled audiences as a violinist, then he won his spurs as an executive with a steel concern in Pittsburgh, and now he is enjoying villainous success in musical comedy.

The nine Adlers, the wife and sons and daughters of the late Jacob P. Adler, dean of the Jewish stage in America, will present a revival of Jacob Gordin's play, "The Stranger," in the Nixon tonight. On Friday night they will offer "Without a Home," also by Gordin.

Henry Schaefer, who plays the role of Rogert in the thriller "Subway Express," scheduled to open in the Nixon next Monday, was a well known female impersonator in Europe about the time Julian Eltinge became known here.

There are 23 characters in "Ladies of the Jury," which George Sharp's company will present in the Pitt next week. There are 12 jurors, the judge, the defendant, the district attorney, the defense attorney, witnesses and court attaches.

Sliding Billy Watson is doing his own "Big Fun Show" comes to the Academy Sunday night with a variety of them.

Pershing's Own Story of the World War

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

Several times we have publicly noted the success which has come to Motor Square Garden since John Hernon was hired as its promoter, so that we are, in a sense, entitled to expose a little (but not real little) trick of which he is guilty. Recently, Mr. Hernon became the father of another son, and there was a great to-do in the Hernon home in Aspinwall.

Mr. Pfarr

As is usually the case there were long and weighty discussions over the baby's name, discussions which were finally settled by the father, who declared that the youngest Hernon should be named Thomas.

That settled, Mr. Hernon immediately got in touch with three persons—Tom Dougherty, the jury commissioner; Mrs. Hernon's mother, whose maiden name was Thomas, and Tom Keen, of the International Greyhound Racing Association. To each, Mr. Hernon confided that the Hernon baby had been named for him or her, which is an old Irish custom. That was two weeks ago.

"And," adds Mr. Hernon, "the ruse failed. We haven't got a single present for Tom."

A tip to those who would win a costume prize at the adsters' ball, for which the three newspaper cartoonists will be judges: dress up as Pa Pitt . . .

In defeat we bow graciously to Attorney John D. Meyer, who has sighted the first robin of the year. Our candidate was Grafton Duvall, the professional robin-sighter, who sighted the first robin last year.

After all, Counsellor Meyer has been sighting robins for 11 years, whereas Robin-sighter Duvall became interested in the sport only a year ago. It is the old story of experience versus youth, Mr. Duvall, for our purposes representing youth.

Mr. Duvall, accepting defeat like a martyr, wishes us to say that he has no excuses to offer, although he did point out that Counsellor Meyer lives in the open spaces of Edgewood, where a robin would naturally migrate. Mr. Duvall spends most of his time in the Philadelphia Building, and who ever heard of the first robin seeking out the Philadelphia Company?

We are more disappointed in Mr. Duvall's failure than we care to admit, because we had a nifty line ready for the presses in case of victory. We were going to say that Mr. Duvall's victory was a triumph for the plain people.

Owner of Cracked Strong Box Sought

SAN ANGELO, Tex., Jan. 28.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Nothing doing on the flying today. If you think this Texas isn't some size, you just try to drive from one part of it to another. Here is San Angelo, the real heart of the cow business, but it's so poor that these old cattlemen are eating their own beef and the bread lines in these towns are composed of independent oil men. They are worse off than the cotton farmer.

MAJOR STREET PLAN PUSHED HERE

TOWN HALL DELAYED AGAIN

Downtown, North Side and Oakland Plans Offered; No Motions Proposed

The selection of a location for a town hall is still before the Board of County Commissioners, although the advocates of numerous sites again presented their arguments yesterday.

A rumor that decision was about to be made brought out all interested parties. A written offer from F. F. Nicola, of the Schenley Farms Company, to construct a hall at Fifth, Tennyson and Ruskin avenues and Bigelow boulevard, Oakland, for $6,000,000, was received but no action was taken.

MAGEE SPEAKS

The town hall question came up when former Mayor William A. Magee addressed the commissioners asking that a downtown location be chosen. He said it is possible to buy land and put up an auditorium downtown without exceeding the $6,000,000 limit.

While he held the floor, the offer of the Nicola interests was brought out by the commissioners.

Magee said:

"We already have monuments in Oakland."

Commissioner McGovern interrupted:

"Not monuments, Mayor, mausoleums. The one costs us $50,000 a year now without depreciation."

OTHER SITES URGED.

The idea of using Soldiers' Memorial Hall for town hall purposes was then discussed. An opinion expressed by the county solicitor indicated that the use of Memorial Hall for that purpose would require special legislation.

Magee asked that if the commissioners cannot select a downtown site, the town hall question be laid aside altogether.

F. J. Osterling reviewed the advantages of the North Side location at River avenue and Anderson street.

William G. Kerr, of the Freehold Real Estate Company, reviewed an offer of 440,000 square feet at Morewood, Bayard, Amberson and Center avenues, Shadyside, at $2 a square foot.

Germany's Lines Will Be Broken, Pershing's Pledge

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

By JOHN J. PERSHING,

Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces.

CHAPTER XVII.

Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

Marshal Joseph Joffre, upon my invitation, arrived at Chaumont October 15, 1917, to see our 1st Division.

The French military officials were anxious to show their respect, and it was arranged to have both an American and a French Guard of Honor drawn up to salute him upon his arrival at my residence. These two small guards vied with each other and both seemed to get a great thrill out of the ceremony.

After an interesting evening with the marshal and his staff as our guests we left the next morning by motor car for Treverav, accompanied by Gens. Ragueneau and Alvord, Cols. de Chambrun and McCoy and Capt. Boyl.

Gen. Pershing

The troops of the division were drawn up in line ready to receive us, and presented a much better appearance than at the review by President Poincare. The men were especially keen to be inspected by a marshal of France, and their pride was clearly evident by their perfect lines as they swung by in the march past. The marshal in turn was enthusiastic over their vigorous appearance and military bearing.

One incident occurred that was not on the program.

On the way to the field for the ceremony a well-groomed mule that happened to be running loose pricked up his ears, looked us over and decided to trot along with us. One of my staff wagered that this wise animal knew what was going on and would be present to see the march past. Sure enough, when we reached our position this Missouri product had preceded us. Cautiously approaching, he displayed the greatest curiosity in the guest of honor. As all efforts to drive him away seemed futile, he hovered near as an interested spectator of the proceedings, much to the amusement of the marshal.

I gave a luncheon at Neufchateau for the marshal's party and my own and the senior officers of the 1st Division. After that we saw the training conducted by the First Corps School and visited the American and French billets at the village of St. Blin, where the 101st Regiment, 26th Division, and the French 69th passed in review in excellent form. As we returned toward Chaumont, other American and French units were drawn up by the roadside in honor of the Marshal.

It was rather late when we started and darkness overtook us while passing on foot through the lines. The trumpets of each regiment sounded as we approached, and with the lights from our automobiles close behind illuminating the trees that bordered the highway and the faces that peered through the shadows to catch a glimpse of the marshal, the scene suggested some legendary painting.

A Night Review

Finally we halted, and the troops, including the French 151st Infantry, which had made a remarkable record at Verdun, marched past us. As the regiments came out of the darkness into the spotlight of our autos they made a picture never to be forgotten.

The political unrest in France at that time found expression in frequent criticism of the government. It was whispered in some circles that there might be a coup d'etat led by an oustanding military figure. The removal of the marshal as commander-in-chief of the French armies (in December, 1916) had not dimmed his popularity as the idol of the people, and he might easily have been selected as the leader of such a

COMMISSION TELLS OF PROGRESS

Reports to Mayor on Zone Work and on Surveys of Newly-Annexed Sections

An outline of activities during 1930 was contained in a report submitted to Mayor Kline by the City Planning Commission late yesterday through L. W. Monteverde, chairman.

Under the heading "major street studies for 1930" is a list of streets and the sections in which they are located, some of which are incomplete and others awaiting analysis and action by the commission.

The report brings out that the Department of Public Works and City Council should be aided in visualizing all improvements in a more comprehensive light by the master plan of major thoroughfares. This plan is being prepared pursuant to the planning act of 1927, under which considerable progress has been made.

ZONING ACTIVITIES

Many duties which devolve upon the commission are outlined in the subject of zoning, which includes preparation of ordinances for all requested changes on the zone map and the text of the ordinance. Thirty-six ordinances amending the zone map and one amending the text of the zoning ordinance were approved by Council during the year.

Newly-annexed territory, including portions of Ross Township and Overbrook Borough, were surveyed and mapped for zoning and districting, the report continued.

Many plans of lots and subdivisions of property submitted were acted upon by the commission, which must approve all plans before they can be presented to Council or for recording.

SURVEYS DETAILED

The report gives in detail the geodetic and topographic survey work, stating definite progress has been realized toward the completion of the survey. Except for extensions of certain work into portions of newly-annexed territory, the horizontal and vertical control surveys were reported completed.

Work on the shade tree division was curtailed to a certain extent by the extreme drought, the report continued. This included hillside improvements. The tree division during the year planted 335 trees on 37 streets.

After reviewing street ordinances, the report concludes with the statement that during the year 38 regular and special meetings, and 66 committee meetings were held by the commission.

JEWS TO HOLD DRIVE MEET

Nine "majors" and 40 team captains were to attend a meeting of men workers in the forthcoming drive of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, in the William Penn Hotel at noon today. The drive will be opened February 15. The meeting today was to be presided over by A. Leo Weil, chairman of the men's division. Speakers were to be Mr. Weil and Alfred M. Oppenheimer, general chairman.

The nine division leaders are Harry J. Applestein, Louis Loewenstein, David Goldman, Isaac Hollander, Oliver M. Kaufmann, Morris Neaman, Isadore Rothstein, S. Leo Ruslander, Saul Schein and Peter Glick.

30 Men Employed On Arsenal High Job

Thirty men have been employed to dig the foundation for the new Arsenal Junior High School, Butler and Thirty-eighth streets, officials of the Board of Education announced. The structure, to cost $1,000,000, will employ about 300 men before it is ready for occupancy in September, 1932. It will accommodate about 1,900 pupils.

St. Xavier Plans Old Fashioned Bazar

An old-fashioned tea party and bazar will be held by the Church of St. Francis Xavier, California avenue and Antrim street, February 4 and 5, in the parish auditorium. Women of the congregawill serve supper from 5:30 until 9 p. m. The Rev. Patrick E. Maher, pastor, is general chairman, assisted by his associates, the Rev. John J. Sullivan and the Rev. R. W. Foster.

EXPERT CITES SOOT PERIL

Mere absence of smoke from the atmosphere does not mean freedom from impurities produced by fuel, especially in an industrial city such as Pittsburgh, H. B. Meller, of the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research, today told members of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers in convention at the William Penn Hotel.

The session was held at the society's laboratory at the United States Bureau of Mines. Dr. T. F. Baker, of Carnegie Tech, greeted the members.

Crediting smoke abatement devices and anti-smoke ordinances for improved conditions, Dr. Meller emphasized that the industrial need is more combustion engineers to study acids caused by fuel waste until such time as electricity serves all purposes of heat, power and light. The address was given at the morning session at which Prof. F. B. Rowley, of University of Minnesota, presided.

The annual banquet will be held tonight. Other speakers heard today were F. C. Houghton, Carl Gutberlet, C. A. Herbert, F. G. Outcalt and M. D. Engle.

Asserting the sootfall in industrial cities amounts to hundreds of tons per square mile yearly, Meller pointed out the corroding and other damages caused by the acids included in soot and in the form of gas. He said:

"The pollution that escapes with flue gas is dissolved by rain and will corrode any material with which it comes in contact and upon which it can act, but it is soon washed off. That occluded in soot is more injurious, as the tar causes firm adherence to anything with which the soot may come in contact. This acid is not readily washed away."

For hygienically clean atmosphere, Meller included control of automobile exhausts and better street and roof cleaning.

NEGRO HUNTED IN AX DEATH

Penn Avenue police today were searching for Willie Williams, a Negro, of Mulberry way, in connection with the murder yesterday of Frank Malone, 35, a Negro, of 2808 Smallman street, police said.

Malone died in West Penn Hospital several hours after he had been hacked, police say, with a hatchet wielded by Williams in the Malone home. Police said that Williams and his estranged wife, Elizabeth met at the Smallman street address and engaged in a card game. An argument ensued between the couple, and when Malone attempted to pacify them Williams was alleged to have taken the hatchet and struck Malone on the head several times. The assailant then fled.

Appeal Planned to Free 'Forgotten' Prisoner

The habeas corpus proceedings for the release of Merdil Queen, of Butler street, from the county jail, where he has been confined since last October without trial, will be carried to the Superior or Supreme courts, W. F. Beatty, counsel for Queen, said today.

Defining the lost information, which was responsible for Queen's confinement, as an "innocent oversight," Judge James H. Gray, in Common Pleas Court, refused to release Queen yesterday.

According to Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk, the information against Queen and Joseph Hoffman was turned over to Indictment Clerk George W. Conner. Later Hoffman pleaded guilty, and it is customary to draw a separate indictment against the remaining defendant. Conners later was informed, Clunk said, that Queen also had pleaded guilty, hence the mixup. A new charge will be brought against Queen, Clunk said.

At yesterday's hearing Attorney Beatty cited the law releasing prisoners remaining in jail during two court terms without trial.

Queen was arrested with Hoffman in the theft of an automobile. Hoffman pleaded guilty and was sentenced five to 10 years in prison.

CITY, CRAFTON ACT TO QUELL MINE FIRE

Steam Shovels to Isolate Burning Section; Borough Will Pay Third of Cost

The City of Pittsburgh and the Borough of Crafton soon will take final steps to extinguish the mine fire burning for several years in the vicinity of Crafton and the city line, on the McShane property, it was decided at a councilmanic finance committee meeting yesterday.

President John S. Herron of Council yesterday asked representatives of the engineering department of Crafton to recommend that the borough council stand one-third of any additional costs. This was agreed to.

Steam shovels will be used to dig around the smouldering fire and isolate the burning section, it was said. A plan by which holes would be drilled and steam injected under heavy pressure was rejected after a consultation with the Department of Public Works and the U. S. Bureau of Mines. Council was told. The method decided on is the most practical, it was said.

Penn. Boy is Healthiest

"MY little son, James, suffered from constipation," says Mrs. A. G. Toner, 267 South 55th St., Philadelphia. "He was having a hard time until I heard of California Fig Syrup and got him some. The first few doses regulated his bowels, brightened him up marvelously; even seemed to strengthen him and help his digestion.

For more than fifty years, mothers have praised California Fig Syrup. Leading physicians advise its use with bilious, headachy, constipated children, or to keep the bowels open during colds or children's diseases. Children love its rich, fruity flavor. SAFETY! Security! A feeling of real protection—you simply must have those qualities in a sanitary pad. And to get them it is wise to specify Kotex.

Kotex, you know, is the sanitary pad that is shaped to fit. It absorbs laterally, which means that you get a larger area of protection than ordinary pads give you.

And you can wear Kotex on either side in perfect safety. It gives you the same degree of efficiency. Kotex stays soft, and it deodorizes, too. It is so easy to dispose of. Assures you of that daintiness particular women demand at all times.

Hospitals use quantities of Kotex for their women patients. They find nothing else so satisfactory.

Theatergoers Want Sex Interest, Anita Block Tells Jewish Women

Sex interest as against the passion of ideas and the intensely personal element as against the general is apparently what theatergoers want, according to Anita Block, who addressed the Pittsburgh Section, National Council of Jewish Women, in the Hebrew "Y" yesterday.

Mrs. Block indicated that audiences want vicarious thrills from a play when the thrills are lacking in their lives and that producers know they can put over any kind of propaganda if the sex element is predominant.

She remarked that anyone not thrilled by what the theater has to offer should be psychoanalyzed, and she also observed that nothing in the world so reflects the attitude of a person towards the theater as calling a play "a show."

In response to requests, Mrs. Block told a little about her work as foreign play reader for the Theater Guild—"a hectic job from beginning to end," she called it, and said it is done entirely in French, Italian or German, never English.

She devoted the greater part of her talk to splendid expositions of a few "artistic failures," those very fine drama which have not been box office successes. With these she compared in no uncertain terms some plays that have succeeded and have had long runs.

A great hope for the theater at present lies in the fact that good plays are now being published, Mrs. Block observed.

Preceding her address, Dr. Roswell Johnson spoke briefly on the relation between birth control and international peace.

COLORED LACE FROCKS TO BE POPULAR FOR SPRING

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Jan. 28.—Lace is now enjoying a colorful existence. For Riviera wear, several houses are showing frocks of lace in black combined with delicate pastel tones. These models have an ethereal quality that is emphasized by the delicacy of the lace used, and it is no wonder that women are eagerly buying frocks of this type. No doubt there will be several models more or less of this type, wherever women foregather, but so charming is the fashion of delicately toned lace that the wearers will find that any annoyance they may feel through this duplication will be mitigated by the charm of the frock and the pleasing picture they themselves present. Most of these frocks tie up with the scarf, as that accessory, although separate from the frock, is very much part of the scheme and adds to the flowing, elusive quality of the model.

* * *

CHANEL, beyond any other designer here, has fostered the career of lace. She has used it for some of her finest models, when other houses did not include even one lace frock in their showing. And so it is fitting that the latest triumphs of lace should be told by her in a creation of surpassing beauty. It is an all-lace frock in three colors, black, flesh pink and pastel blue. The lace is cut in petal shaped pieces of graduated depths. Though the lines of the frock are softly clinging, there is a decided flare in the lower half of the skirt which is circular and built over crin to give body and firmness. The separate scarf combines the three colors.

* * *

THE MORE PRACTICAL frock also sketched is by Jean Patou. It is a neat tailored model of dark brown woolen, the material being of soft texture and of medium weight. A slashed apron with cuff pockets at the top is an unusual note. The upright collar and linked cuffs are of pique.

Pershing Relates Marshal's Encounter With Missouri Mule; Troop in Trenches

movement had it been seriously projected.

Denies Rumor

Speaking of the possibility as we drove back, he said confidentially that it had been discussed and that it might occur under certain circumstances.

But much to his credit, he hastened emphatically, and I think very sincerely, to disclaim any ambition in that direction. If the idea ever found lodgment among the opposition to the government, it never got beyond a very small coterie. In fact, there existed no actual crisis that was likely to precipitate a change in the form of government.

October 17, 1917, the following summary was sent to Washington showing the estimate of the situation in Europe:

"* * * The Germans on Western front have been reinforced by four divisions from the Russian front, giving a present total of 150 divisions.

"Persistent reports from widely separated sources of an (early) offensive by Germany and Austria against Italy. * * *

"Manifest that Germany is making determined effort to use present economic difficulties of Switzerland to excite Swiss people against Allies * * * French report activity on part of Swiss in construction of fortifications on French border.

"Reports indicate that after the failure of the Peace Conference asked for in Pope's peace proposal the German government began active efforts to stiffen the spirit of the country."

Returning to Paris October 19 I learned that a dispatch from Berlin to the New York Times represented me as having said that the German lines were impregnable. The report might have been idle gossip, but it was more probably circulated to create the impression that our armies were starting on a forlorn hope. This report was so far from the truth that I cabled the Secretary of War that it was absolutely false and without any foundation whatever.

Task Thought Impossible

In every reference to our future operations I had strongly maintained that it was not only possible to break the German lines, but that it would be done. The very system of training that we were persistently following was based on the determination to force the Germans out of their trenches and beat them in the open. On no other theory could they have been defeated.

Yet, without question, there were not a few among our Allies and probably some in our own Army who thought the task impossible, supporting their view by citing the failures of the previous three years, especially that of the spring of 1917. It was none the less a surprise, however, when a report came directly to me that such views had actually been expressed in the presence of civilian visitors by officers of rank in our Army.

I was indignant to learn of that kind of talk, and in commenting on it to the Americans who had heard such statements made I said that "the German lines can be broken, they must be broken, and they will be broken," and those present will recall that it was said with considerable emphasis.

Positive steps were taken at once to eradicate such notions, or at least prevent them from being openly stated, and I was determined to relieve immediately any officer, without regard to rank, who should express any such opinion. The following letter was sent to the several divisions and to other commanders:

Objects to Pessimism

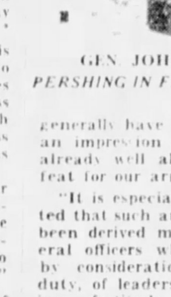
1. Americans recently visiting our training areas and coming in contact with officers in high command, have received a note of deep pessimism, including apprehension of undue hardships to be undergone, of the disadvantages of billeting as compared to field conditions that have prevailed in our own country, of the great numbers of the enemy, and a belief in the impregnability of his lines, mingled with some comment on the peculiarities of our allies, and generally have come away with an impression that the war is already well along toward defeat for our arms.

"It is especially to be regretted that such an impression has been derived mainly from general officers who, if prompted by considerations of soldierly duty, of leadership, of patriotism, fortitude and ambition, should maintain quite an opposite attitude.

"2. While realizing that optimism cannot be created by order, it should be unnecessary to point out that such a state of mind on the part of officers in responsible positions is at once reflected among their troops, and it is not an over statement to say no officer worthy of command would give expression to thoughts of depression, much less communicate to untutored civilians false ideas of the morale of our troops. A conservative firmness and faith in our cause is not inconsistent with a serious estimate of an enemy's forces or even of a grave strategic or tactical situation, but I hardly need add that a temperament which gives way to weak complaining; which views with apprehension the contact with the enemy; which carps at the individuality of our Allies, and querulously protests at hardships such as all soldiers must expect to endure, marks an unfitness for command of such an officer, and indicates his practical defeat before he goes to battle.

Officers Warned

"3. The officer who cannot read hope in the conditions that confront us; who is not inspired and uplifted by the knowledge that under the leadership of our Chief Executive the heart of our nation is in this war; who shrinks from hardship; who does not exert his own personal influence to encourage his men, and who fails in the lofty attitude which should characterize the general that expects to succeed, should yield his position to others with more of of our national courage. The consciousness of such an attitude should in honor dictate an application for relief.



President Wilson

"Whenever the visible effects of it on the command of such an officer reach me in future, it will constitute grounds for his removal without application.

"John J. Pershing."

Nothing more was heard of the existence of such sentiments within our army, if, indeed, they had ever found more than a temporary lodgement in the minds of a few naturally timid or critically inclined souls. The mere suggestion that such views might be held only made it all the more imperative to emphasize and develop an aggressive spirit among our troops.

My general impression of the situation at this time was set forth in a cable to Washington October 21:

"During the past week the water-soaked ground in Flanders and on the western front generally has prevented further development of offensive movements. Summing up wastage of German army in this year's campaign, a single offensive, such as the Anglo-French in Flanders in progress since July 31, is insufficient materially to weaken Germany's man power. Next year must see two offensives, continuously maintained throughout summer, if decisive result is to be obtained. This can only be secured through aid of effective United States Army on this side. . . . The troops on the western front have been reinforced by one German division from the Russian front. . . ."

As the training of the First Division had now progressed sufficiently, it was put into line in the quiet sector northeast of Luneville (see map, left and below), under the supervision of the French, for actual trench experience. The division was underofficered and short of horses, clothing and many other things, especially rolling kitchens, of which a few had only recently been received, and trucks, which were borrowed from the French.

Americans Go to Front

My repeated cables beginning in July, for winter clothing, had received scant attention, and with the coming of colder weather the shortage became critical. The initial stock requested was disallowed, the monthly allotments were totally inadequate and the depots were practically empty.

The explanation that came from the quartermaster general's office, that our requests could not be granted on account of the needs at home, showed a total lack of appreciation of the necessity of properly clothing the fighting man actually at the front above all others. After another urgent appeal, a partial supply was sent, but we had succeeded in obtaining a quantity of clothing from the British to tide us over.

Notwithstanding all these handicaps the men were highly enthusiastic over the prospects of this new experience, and the rest of us were gratified that at last we were to be represented on the front. Thirty days were allotted for this preliminary training, one battalion at a time of each regiment occupying the line for a period of 10 days.

The sector had been inactive and uneventful since the stormy days of 1914, when Gen. de Castelnau halted the German advance on the Grande Couronne de Nancy. A few of the French remained in their homes in advance of our support positions, while on the German side people continued to live near enough to the front lines to be seen going to church on Sundays. This presented to the men an odd contrast to the pictures of war which they had built up in their imaginations.

Fay King Condemns Prudery as Prejudice, Holds Prudence Essential

By FAY KING

There is such a general revolt against prudery these days that rather than be thought a prude about anything persons are acting without prudence in everything.

A prude is a person who approaches all things with such stiff unbending over-sensitiveness which, whether real or assumed, makes him more or less of a pest.

But the person who lacks all prudence and accepts all things without the least differentiation between what is good and what is bad is sadly in need of the proper pride and cautions which is fair to himself and others.

To be a prude is a bad thing, but to have no prudence is even worse. Prudery is prejudice. Prudence is judgment.

A proper amount of prudence is essential.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Sound Teeth Depend Upon Sound Health

It is not possible to regard the teeth as structures wholly separate from the entire fabric of organism. The condition of the whole body is quite likely to be reflected in the teeth. When one feels well, when one eats well, one will find perfect teeth.

Dr. Copeland

Diet is one of the fundamental factors in the upkeep of the body. But it is not all. It is not enough merely to eat to live. It would be sensible.

Diet is of particularly important in the formative period, that is during the pre-natal and infant stages. A plentiful supply of milk, of the mineral-bearing fruits and vegetables, and the chief requirements during this time.

It is not the [illegible] a mother [illegible] the [illegible] infant and retain health during pregnancy. Her baby must have the benefit of [illegible] feeding and direct sunlight.

Of course, during the long winter months, when there is little sunshine, growing children need the protective vitamins found in codliver oil, orange and tomato juice, along with the milk diet. These foods reinforce the bone and tooth building forces in the little body.

All the common rules of health must be observed if a child is to have sound teeth. If he eats candy to his heart's content, if he is permitted to eat up late at night, if he spends his days playing indoors instead of out-of-doors in the sunshine, then good mothers, you are laying up future misfortune for your child.

From the time baby's teeth begin to appear they should be cleansed with clean gauze wet with water or salt solution. By the time the child is three years old he should have about 20 temporary teeth. Now is the time to begin visits to the dentist for these teeth will perhaps need repairing. Let a child be the proud possessor of his own toothbrush and dentifrice, and learn to brush his own teeth.

The teeth should be brushed after every meal. They should be brushed from the gums upward or downward, not across, in order to remove every particle of food that may lodge between the teeth. Rub the gums every day with a clean cloth or toothbrush. This hardens the gums and stimulates the circulation there. A child can be easily taught these simple rules for teeth protection.

Use plenty of hard foods, as well as nourishing foods. The teeth and jaws need exercise as much as do the muscles. Body exercise is necessary for everyone, even for the baby. Let the baby kick freely. He loves it and needs it. See that the members of your family have all the sunlight and fresh air they possibly can.

Have even the youngest 3-year-old visit the dentist at least every six months. Let him find the cavities when they are small and when they can be taken care of painlessly. Everything that can be done to promote the general health should be done, for on it, as I have said before, depend sound teeth.

Household Hints

When patch floats need washing in water, use warm water in which has been dissolved some salt in proportion of about one-half cup to a gallon of water. The floor dries soon and does not become icy.

How many of us have all the attachments for our sewing machines but never use any of them? It is only a question of learning how, and a half-hour at the shop where the machine was purchased would save many hours of labor.

Let the child have a pet, if at all possible. It will develop gentleness and kindness in the child, besides affording a great deal of amusement. Then you need never worry who accosts your boy on the street when a growling protector is just waiting for a sign of enmity.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Visiting Card

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly settle an argument? Is it correct on a young lady's visiting card to have the "Miss" engraved before the name?

A claims it should be Mary Smith. B says it should be Miss Mary Smith. I. C. W.

B is correct. It is extremely bad form for a young lady, even a very young lady, not to have the title engraved before her name. Without the "Miss" the card looks unfinished, and it would indicate at once that there had been social error. You see it is logical that this should be so, for a visiting card is most formal and therefore would call for formal expression. There should be no abbreviations also, another formal detail.

As a matter of fact, I have seen lately some formal birth announcements, the kind where the small card of the baby is attached to the "Mr. and Mrs." card on which the title of "Miss" or "Master" is engraved before the baby's name! And some of the most conservative New York engravers, stationers, indorse this. So you see how early this formality begins!

The Gallant Move

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When a gentleman escorts a lady home, and the latter happens to live in an apartment where there is an electric elevator to take its tenants up, is it correct for the gentleman to leave the lady at the elevator or is he supposed to take her up to her door? EUNICE.

In this case it would be correct, because more gallant for him to take her to her door. In other words, his escort should cover the time when she needs his protection.

Correctly Introducing One's Mother

Will you please tell me the correct way of introducing one's mother? Is it correct to mention the last name?

H. N.

The form "this is" is a very appropriate one to use for this kind of family introduction, and it can, if we put the proper expression into it, become one of the most gracious kinds of introductions. And for all people, women and men, older people and younger people.

"Mrs. Allen, this is my mother." "Mr. Forbes, this is my mother" . . . these are correct.

Or if you wish you may say, "Mother, may I present Mr. Forbes?" or "Mother, this is Mr. Thomas Forbes."

Whether or not you mention her name depends on your own wish. If the name is the same as yours, there is usually no reason for mentioning the name. If her name varies from yours, you may mention it, if you wish, but, even in this case it is not necessary to do this.

LOCAL LEFT-HANDER TO JOIN BRAVES

MANAGER BILL M'KECHNIE, of the Boston Braves, left last night for the home offices in the Hub, where today he will meet with President Emil Fuchs and Secretary Eddie Cunningham for the purpose of completing arrangement for the spring training tour of the Tribe. Before leaving his Wilkinsburg home, Skipper Bill informed the Sun-Telegraph that he had made plans to add Regis Leheny, Oakland left hander, to his pitching division. McKechnie has heard enough about the skill of this native youth to feel convinced that Leheny stands a good chance of becoming a star.

Regis Leheny

The Oaklander is the son of Lieut. Peter J. Leheny, of the Pittsburgh police. The father also was a slab artist in his diamond days. Regis, 21, is more than 6 feet in height and weighs about 180 pounds in pitching condition. Al Mamaux, Newark manager, also dickered with Leheny, but it is likely that the young southpaw will prefer to cast his lot with McKechnie and the Braves. Mamaux saw Regis work last season while the Pittsburgher wore the uniform of the Toronto Maple Leafs in the International League.

DURING HIS STAY with the Toronto club Leheny was pitted against the Detroit Tigers in an exhibition game. He amazed both Steve O'Neill, manager of the Leafs, and Bucky Harris, Detroit pilot, by pitching and winning a four-hit game against the big leaguers.

Deeply impressed by the performance of the youthful lefthander, Harris approached him with the idea of learning something about the recruit. The Toronto club is a Detroit farm, and Harris probably planned to have Leheny shifted to the Tigers after the Pittsburgher had acquired more experience in "Double A" company.

HOWEVER, WHEN LEHENY found he was not regarded as a regular in Toronto he asked to be farmed out, where he could get the steady pitching he needed for development. Accordingly, he was sent to Bridgeport, but there he developed a sore arm and could not work. The Toronto bosses ordered him back, but Leheny came to Pittsburgh for treatment without getting permission from his employers.

A mix-up ensued and Regis finally obtained his unconditional release. He is now a free agent. The youngster has remarkable speed and a fine curve, but requires work to gain control. McKechnie specializes in bringing promising hurlers to the fore and Leheny probably would come fast under his tutelage.

M'KECHNIE ALSO DISCLOSED that he is banking on Walter Maranville for another season at shortstop in the Boston lineup, instead of moving him over to second base, as some winter stories have said he planned to do. The little veteran had a brilliant season last year, and there is no recruit in the Wigwam at present who appears to have the stuff to push the Rabbit aside and crowd him out of his berth. Buster Chatham may be used part of the time in the shortfield role, as McKechnie has some impressive rookies for the third-base job, the spot where Buster cavorted last year.

Rabbit Maranville

BUT THE REGULAR shortstop will be Maranville and nobody else, McKechnie makes it clear. Bill may decide to shift the Rabbit to the comparatively easy second-base job at some later date, in order to prolong his career, but he cannot see his way clear to do this now.

Pirate fans will recall that the little infielder played 152 games at second base for the Buccaneers under McKechnie in 1924 and enjoyed a great season. The Rabbit found the second-base duties so much less trying than those of the shortstop job that he said he would be able to play the position in a wheel chair when he had a gray beard.

THE FACT THAT Ed Phillips, bought from the Athletics by the Pirates to fill the hole in the catching department, has been let go by four other major league clubs at various times, doesn't mean that he hasn't a good chance to come through for the Bucs.

Phillips never was given a real opportunity anywhere else except in Detroit, and the Tigers, instead of casting him adrift, sent him back to their Toronto farm, where they would have kept him until needed if the A's had not drafted him. The new Buc does not rank high in the batting averages, but he is said to be a strong defensive player, and it was defensive weakness that caused the Pirates to finish fifth last year.

FAR FROM PLANNING to ask the Pirates to play night baseball when they meet his Cubs in spring practice games in California, Rogers Hornsby won't allow even his own club to play under such conditions if it can be avoided. "We'll be out on the coast to get into physical condition for the National League race," Hornsby said. "One of the things necessary to get ball players into shape is warm sunshine. How are you going to get any sunshine at night? Those electric lights won't make the players perspire, and if they don't perspire they're not getting into shape."

WHILE THE BOXING chiefs at Madison Square Garden in New York were still bewailing the disappointing gate at the recent Schaaf-Braddock show, which drew only $14,337, they received another shock in the form of a message from Charles (Pop) Foster, manager of Jimmy McLarnin, to the effect that Jimmy hereafter will fight welterweights only.

This means there will be no return bout between McLarnin and Billy Petrolle. That was the only $100,000 match in sight and the Garden people had counted on it to make up for several other shows which failed to yield the anticipated revenue. Foster says McLarnin weighs 146 now, and would not fight below that figure even if he could get Benny Leonard.

Nat Holman

The abolition of the center jump and the adoption of regulations against the freezing of the ball except in the last few minutes of play are basketball changes recommended by Nat Holman, former Celtic star, now coach of City College of New York.

In addition to these radical suggestions, Nat advocates the standardization of the size of the playing courts, proposing 75 feet as the ideal length.

"THE HEIGHT OF a team's center has become too important a factor," Holman says. "Abolish the tap-off or center play and let the ball be turned over to the team last scored on, giving it position under the opposing five's basket. Keep the jump only for starting the game and after a held ball. As to freezing, unnecessary maneuvering in the back court spoils a game as a spectacle. There is a legitimate use of freezing, it must be admitted. A team is entitled to freeze the ball the last two or three minutes of play to protect a slim lead. That much should be allowed, but at all other times a team should be compelled to move up the floor whether it is up against a zone defense or not. When a team of able and experienced players, content with a five point lead, returns to the back court to freeze the ball with from 12 to 15 minutes to play, then I question its strategy as well as its sportsmanship. I think it's good basketball to know how to freeze the ball, but freezing should be done only in the last two or three minutes of play."

FIERRO VICTIM IN GARDEN BATTLE

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

A "knockout" went into the records at Motor Square Garden last night that was a travesty on ring justice.

Credit for scoring it goes to Johnny Datto, Filipino of Cleveland, with Harry Fierro, bushy-haired Chicagoan, the victim in the seventh round after he had been fouled twice, once in the fourth round and again in the sixth, and gamely had resumed fighting when Referee Al Grauber, who apparently was not in position to see either low punch when it landed, refused to recognize his claims and counted up to nine each time.

Finally, in the seventh, with Fierro coming up in a weakened condition, Datto went to work battering him further about the body, and Fierro, fighting back himself, landed a left low on the tights, and as he did sank down again. This time he was counted out. At 10 he arose and rushed at Datto in the latter's corner, but was pushed away by the referee and fell again, and went through a show of agony in his exhausted condition.

FOULS TURN TIDE

But for Datto's fouling, it is likely Fierro would have won the decision handily. Outweighed by three and one-half pounds at 120, he cleverly outboxed Datto in the first three rounds, keeping in close and hooking short to the head and body with both fists, and making the Filipino look bad. In the second round, he lost his balance and touched the floor with his gloves as Datto swung a right that struck him on the back, but he easily carried the frame. In the third, they bumped heads, with Fierro getting the worse of it, for he had a cut opened on his head and had to shake off the dazing effects. However, he continued to force the fighting and Datto did not land his first real punch until late in this round, when he got over a one-two combination to the head.

They began to mix in the fourth and Fierro was forced to the ropes and hurt and held on. He came out of it and was carrying the fight to Datto again vigorously when the latter suddenly let go a right that landed low and Fierro staggered back and went down, claiming a foul. Referee Grayber hesitated momentarily and then took up the count with the knockdown timer. At nine Fierro dragged himself up with an effort and moved in close and clinched his way through to the bell. The cut on his head was bleeding as he went to his corner.

SECOND LOW PUNCH

Fierro was cautious when he came up for the fifth round and kept on the move, with Datto in pursuit. It was not until late in the round that Harry began to come back and then he again took the play away from his opponent

Johnny Datto, of Cleveland, won by a knockout over Harry Fierro, of Chicago, in the seventh round of their main bout at Motor Square Garden last night, after fouling Fierro in the fourth and sixth rounds. The referee counted up to nine each time, refusing to allow the claim of a low blow. The two crucial moments preceding the knockout are pictured above.

Pittsburgh's ambitious Yellow Jackets will be aiming at an International League hockey record when they meet their jinx foemen, Buffalo's pace-setting Bisons at Duquesne Garden tomorrow night.

The Schooley skaters at present boast a win string of four triumphs and a tie in their last five starts. The season's best string of successes in International loop milling is seven, recently established by the London Tecumsehs. It takes no demon mathamatician to dope out that the locals can establish a new mark by staving off defeat for another week.

COMPETITION KEEN

Windsor snapped London's string just before coming here to bow in 2-1 defeat last Saturday, and the competition is becoming so extremely keen that any successive victories record now established probably will stand until the close of the campaign.

Although the Jackets have not been able to "take" the Bisons this season, they have every reason to suppose that a triumph over the leaders is only about a day away. Conditions will be ideal tomorrow for a continuation of Pittsburgh's success. The locals displayed fine form in downing Windsor their last time out, and several days of diligent practice has put them at the peak of their game. Furthermore, the Jackets will have the advantage of a liberal amount of home support. The heavy advance ticket sale assures a capacity crowd, and unless the fans in attendance are an entirely new set it will be an enthusiastic gathering.

BISONS STRENGTHENED

The Schooley icemen, with only hoofs and jeers to urge them on, held the Bisons to a 1-1 tie the last time they were Buffalo's guests. The Bisons probably had this "close call" in mind recently when they rushed out and signed Gauthier, a new star, to reinforce their ranks for their Pittsburgh invasion.

Cleveland, the only other club in the loop that has yet to feel the Jackets' defeat sting, is to attempt a little championship defending here Saturday. The Indians have found the going very rough of late, and Schooley will lift an eyebrow in surprise if his stalwarts are stopped before the dawn of another week.

BE EXAMINED NOW

IF YOU ARE AILING DON'T GIVE UP.
I HAVE HELPED OTHERS. WHY NOT YOU?

If you are ailing, whether it is your Stomach—Heart—Liver, or some disorder you do not understand, you should have a thorough examination to find out the cause of your trouble. Most troubles can be benefited—even many cases now incurable might have been benefited if properly treated in time—not neglected because thought lightly of when first noticed. So if you are not sure of your health DON'T DELAY, BUT HAVE AN EXAMINATION MADE TODAY.

IF YOU WANT TO BE ACTIVE—STRONG—ENERGETIC—SUCCESSFUL—HAPPY

Then take care of your health. Health is not a matter of luck—but a matter of care. It makes you fit for the emergencies—the world gives its prizes to the physically fit. If you are ailing you should realize the high cost of being careless about your health. "I Hope Your Example Will Compel The Adoption Of Sanitary Methods"

Says

DR. THOS. J. McLAUGHLIN

STATE BOARD OF MEDICAL REGISTRATION

Rhode Island
Public Health Commission

THOMAS J. McLAUGHLIN, M. D.

WOONSOCKET, May 21st, 1930.

The American Cigar Company,
#111 Fifth Avenue,
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen-

Permit me to commend you for your crusade against the old-fashioned method of cigar making which involved the use of "spit" or "saliva." There are many unsanitary processes still employed in industry which are very difficult to eliminate without the aid of industry itself.

Not only the public officer charged with the responsibility of improving conditions of health generally but every one immediately recognizes that the use of "spit" in the manufacture of cigars is not only unsanitary but has latent dangers to health of great magnitude. I feel it incumbent upon myself, therefore, as a public officer charged with protecting the public health to use this means of telling you that in campaigning against such a method of manufacture you are rendering a public service.

I sincerely hope that your example and your campaign will compel the abandonment of such methods of manufacture of cigars by the industry generally and the adoption by all of the manufacturers of sanitary methods in the manufacture of cigars.

You are at liberty to use this expression of my commendation in the furtherance of your laudable campaign for better sanitation.

Yours very truly,
Thos. J. McLaughlin, M. D.
Chairman State Board of Health
State of Rhode Island.

...one of 56 health officials from 56 different points approving Cremo's crusade against spit or spit-tipping.

Every smoker, every wife whose husband smokes cigars, should read Dr. McLaughlin's letter.

"Who are the friends of 'Spit'?"

YOU MAY WELL ASK THIS QUESTION WHEN 56 IMPORTANT HEALTH OFFICIALS HAVE WRITTEN SO STRONGLY AGAINST THE EVILS OF SPIT OR SPIT-TIPPING.

Dr. McLaughlin writes: "Permit me to commend you for your crusade against the old-fashioned method of cigar making which involved the use of 'spit'."

The war against spit is a crusade of decency. Join it...Smoke Certified Cremo – a really wonderful smoke – mild – mellow – nut-sweet! Every leaf entering the clean, sunny Cremo factories is scientifically treated by methods recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture.

In this period of cold weather and cracked lips, above all insist on a cigar—free of the spit germ.

Fifth Avenue High's basketball team failed to recover from a wild burst of courage on the part of Babe Dee and Shoulnat Ware Westinghouse luminaries in the second period of the tussle on the Uptowners' floor yesterday, dropped the final game of the first half of the City league campaign and enabled Westinghouse to finish in undisputed possession of first place. The count at the finish was 19-14.

While Ware counted in the first period, Fifth Avenue failed to score. In the second period Ware added a basket and Dee a free throw. Allegheny conquered the Oliver five in Section II by the same margin, the first half finale from Langley by a score of 52 to 27.

FAST START

Westinghouse tallied nine points to Fifth's two in the second quarter yesterday after being held even at four-all in the first. Leading by 13 to 6 at the start of the third period, the Westinghouse players were holding check in the third quarter and were credited with a point, while Fifth picked up three markers, but in the last eight minutes of the action the Silver Lakers outscored their dogged opponents by six to five and maintained a safe margin all the way.

Purliano was the most potent factor in Fifth's attack dumping in three baskets, all made under extreme pressure. Joe (Showboat) Ware matched these three buckets for Westinghouse.

Yesterday's contests wound up the first half campaigns in both the City league and in the W. P. I. A. L. In other City League frays, Peabody bumped Allderdice 26-15, Perry topped Oliver, 40-16 and South Hills trumped Carrick, 22-13.

BEAVER FALLS WINS

Beaver Falls High took the lead in Section IV of the W. P. I. A. L. by nosing out New Brighton, 28-26, in a whirlwind contest, copping first half honors, while Monessen gathered in the harm in Section V by barely beating Charleroi, 22-21.

Scott High, of North Braddock, pulled away to tighten its hold on the lead in its section by walloping Braddock, 35-17.

In other important W. P. I. A. L. contests, Wilkinsburg High bumped Edgewood, 31-9; Larentum beat out Has-Brack, 31-27; McKees Rocks trimped Coraopolis, 22-18; East Pittsburgh bowed to Turtle Creek, 40-22; Avalonwall defeated Etna, 14-10, and Stowe knocked off Mt. Lebanon, 21-18.

TONY HERRERA VICTOR

At Chicago, Jimmy Reeves defeated Jim Carpenter, Richmond, Ind.

DATTO'S FOULS KAYO FIERRO

with his short hooking in close, but it was Datto's round.

With the clang of the bell for the sixth round Fierro was back to his slugging form, making a mince-meat of Datto with his two-fisted attack. Datto was all at sea in the rough rough until he suddenly let his another low punch, this time a left, which virtually all of the fans saw, but which escaped the referee. To the accompaniment of booing and threats from the crowd against Datto, Gracher again counted over the fallen Fierro and then disqualified Datto for his repeated fouling against Fierro after he had been warned.

The knockout "victory" is a hollow one for Datto, but nothing can be done about it now, although Fierro should have won on a foul as the bout was fought. Mac Schneling won the heavyweight championship of the world from Jack Hackett in a decision, but Datto let him off easy when he landed his foul punch. It should not be necessary for a fighter to be killed before official cognizance is taken by the officials of the fact that his opponent is resorting to unfair tactics to win when he cannot make progress otherwise. The rules of the sport in this state say there shall be no hitting below the belt; they do not stipulate that a boxer must be carried out of the ring on a stretcher before a low blow becomes a foul, and Fierro was entitled to protection under those rule. He didn't get it.

THOMAS BEATS BARTLETT

Jimmy Thomas, Negro, of the Hill, fought a finely-paced battle to beat Ollie Bartlett, veteran ring fighter from Oklahoma and Detroit, in the eight-round semi-final. He carried the first two rounds on his straight hitting and in the second round draped Bartlett over the ropes under his counter punching. He let Ollie crowd him all around the ring in the next three rounds which the invader won, but he came back to drop Bartlett momentarily twice in the sixth, coasted again in the seventh and, in the eighth, handed Ollie a bad beating, splitting his right eye to add the score to that from a bad left ear which Bartlett carried into the ring with him.

It was a good win for young Thomas, who boxed and punched in cool, workmanlike fashion throughout. Bartlett has been fighting a long time and has met many of the better bantams. Jimmy will rate good bouts from now on. He scaled 119½ pounds against 121½ for Bartlett.

Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, 149, belted out Al Munro, Negro of the Hill, 148½, subbing for Jimmy McGraw, of Wheeling, with a right to the jaw after 2 minutes 35 seconds of the third round. He gave Munro a good "taker," a drubbing all of the way.

SEVERO SHOWS CLASS

Louie Severo, of Meadville, showed pleasing form, both as a boxer and a puncher in winning over Harry Fine, of the Hill, 140, in the six-round opener.

Red Robinson alternated with Graeber in refereeing the bouts. Frank Brown and Frank Ferris were the judges. A. C. Couch and Norman Borland did the timing and Harry Klaas was the announcer.

SPORT SHORTS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., (AP).—Rube Marquard, former National League pitcher who for the past two seasons has managed the local club of the Southeastern League, has been released.

Cleveland—Jeff Carlin, former W. & J. sports star, now basketball coach and assistant football coach at Case, and Miss Virginia Walters of New York City were married here yesterday. The newlyweds are to make their home here.

BRANNON BOXES ANDERSON IN WINDUP

Eddie Brannon, local Negro featherweight, who recently stopped Jimmy Kelly and defeated Frankie Christian in bouts at the Motor Square Garden here, has been matched to box Eddie Anderson, of Wyoming, in the 10-round windup at Motor Square Garden next Monday night. Anderson fought a good battle with Tony Herrera at the Garden several weeks ago. Ted Rose, middleweight, of Chicago, and formerly of Pittsburgh, boxes Jackie Tarr, West of Donora, in the eight-round semi-final.

Anderson will be remembered as having married before a bout in an Omaha ring last week. Perhaps as an added attraction at the Garden he will agree to have a judge order a divorce decree.

Between Rounds

Billy Rose, of Cincinnati, enters here with a fine record of battles against well-known performers for his tilt with Jimmy Kelly in the Motor Temple, Friday night, and will enter the ring the favorite to win. This will be his first appearance in Pittsburgh. He has boxed Tony Mateo and Benny McArthurs in Mcheerport.

Eddie and Fritzie Zivic will be on the card of amateur boxing bouts at the benefit show to be held for Father James R. Cox's relief fund in the Motor Temple one week from tonight. Eddie will box Benny Auld, of the North Braddock A. C., and Fritzie will be in with Gerald Clemente, also of North Braddock. The Zivics are proteges of Jack Metz of the Willow Club. Mike Cheatyan, Tom Judge and George Schlee are others who will box at the show.

Others who will bear at the show. Tickets for the show went on sale today at the Spalding, Wagner and Brown sporting goods store.

Jack Johnson, at 53, still talks about doing a comeback and shouting up the present crop of heavyweights. Unless memory plays us false, a similar comeback attempt several years ago was wrecked on the shoals of a knockout defeat at the fists of Bob Dawson, a northern Negro. Right heavyweight.

HARRY KECH

HAUS GIRLS BUSY

Henry Beck, manager of the Haus Athletic club, reports that his boxers are busy training for the Golden Gloves tournament. Pete Bogart, Billy Rochester, Jerry Kelly, Steve Kiraly and Joe Mack are among those who will box for the Haus club. Kiraly is to meet the Wheeling boxer.

LAYTON LOSES, THREE-YEAR REIGN ENDS

CHICAGO, Jan. 28 (AP).—Johnny Layton's three-year reign as the world three-cushion billiard champion ended last night when he was beaten, 50 to 47, in 40 innings by Allen Hall of Chicago in the first championship tournament.

His defeat definitely eliminated him from the championship, which now is between Hall and Arthur Thurnblad of Chicago. Hall and Thurnblad meet for the title tonight.

Prices Ignore Poor Steel Reports; Lone Star Gas Lower in Early Trading

Publication of the United States Steel and Jones & Laughlin reports showing the extent of the fourth quarter let down in activity had very little effect on stock values at the opening today. Prices on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange remained steady while the New York list leaned upon noticeably after modest declines were absorbed at the start.

Lone Star Gas developed greater activity than had been evident for one time when it executed a dip of more than a point in the first half hour's trading.

The selling was inspired by victory of a municipal ownership proclaim in the election at Fort Worth, Texas, where Lone Star makes its home. Officials of Lone Star, stated that earnings would not be affected and that he is confident the ultimate outcome will be favorable to Lone Star and its stockholders. Other sections of the market were dull and very quiet.

Fort Worth Wins On City Ownership

FORT WORTH, Tex., Jan. 28. Authorization of municipal ownership of gas has been won in the elections here yesterday by a vote of 3,075 to 1,511. Gas service in the city is supplied by a subsidiary of Lone Star Gas Co. Officials of the company state that further step by the municipality will be necessary to actually take operations out of their hands. This would take several years. While the charter to municipal ownership has been authorized, this does not necessarily mean that it will take place. The authorization may be used merely as a threat in the utility's rate disputes.

'Big Fellows' of Finance Aren't Super-Geniuses

By B. C. FORBES

Mr. Forbes

IS WALL STREET [illegible] by unscrupulous knaves? The [illegible] of the [illegible] there [illegible]

"What has most impressed me during the last two years or more has not been knavery in the highest financial circles but dumbness."

What [illegible] about [illegible] Wall Street before and since the 1929 panic?

MANY LEADERS [illegible] Wall Street [illegible] whooped up [illegible] excitement [illegible] their power [illegible] to unwary [illegible] having [illegible] crash which [illegible] so this [illegible] possible. Wall Street [illegible] famous week [illegible] public at [illegible] palmed off [illegible] prices.

LETTERS RECEIVED [illegible] column [illegible] number of people [illegible] conviction that [illegible] in Wall Street made [illegible] fortunes [illegible] boom crashed. If [illegible] prices kept their money in banks for many months [illegible] have been rebuying [illegible] stocks.

I think I may [illegible] without immodesty, that I have been more closely in touch with Wall Street and its doings and doers than have most of the letter writers. From [illegible] I have been able to gather, I cannot but say frankly that the popular impression of what has happened is far from the truth in [illegible].

In my judgment the majority of the "big fellows" are less comfortable financially today than they were a year or three years ago. Many of them have been either [illegible] or heavily wiped out. I am quite sure that not one in 10 is worth more now than in the first half of 1929.

THE "BIG FELLOWS" are not the super-geniuses widely imagined. Their stock market judgment notoriously is imperfect. In my earlier days I sometimes acted on a "tip" from some financial nabob—and 75 per cent of the times was stung.

AS I CALMLY ponder the events of 1928-29-30, my conclusion is that among the "big fellows" there has been less knavery than dumbness. They were just as short-sighted as most of the rest of us—and have paid quite as dearly for their blindness.

STEEL COMMON EARNINGS CUT

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 (AP).—The United States Steel Corporation earned $9.12 per common share in 1930, as compared to record earnings of $21.19 in 1929, and $12.50 in 1928, $9.10 in 1927.

Net of $9.12 a share for 1930 was disclosed with issuance of the corporation's statement for the third quarter of the year showing 70 cents per share earned for the quarter on 8,687,435 shares outstanding at the end of the year. This compared with $2.06 a share in the preceding quarter and $4.14 a share on 8,142,840 shares in the third quarter of 1929.

Directors ordered the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 a common share, as well as the quarterly payment of $1.75 on the preferred. Although payment of the regular common dividend resulted in a deficit for the quarter of $9,144,897, excess earnings over common dividends in the first nine months of the year enabled the corporation to carry a fat balance to surplus of $18,891,675 for 1930. The corporation's conservative dividend policy during the record year of 1929 enabled it to carry a balance to surplus of $108,903,232 for that year.

Duke Hints That He Is Not Free to Propose

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Connie Calvert shares her home and fortune with her half-sister, Kitty, whom she found destitute in New York's underworld. Kitty falls in love with Jim Tracy, Connie's former fiance. Believing Jim to be a fortune-hunter, Connie, to save Kitty, enlists the aid of Duke Garson, Kitty's friend and underworld intelligence man. He warns Connie that her butler is a crook and that her mother should guard her pearls. Later, Duke is about to declare his love for Connie when Jim appears. He claims he was held up and is afraid to go home. Connie invites him to stay. Duke doubts Jim's story. That night, Mrs. Calvert's pearls are stolen. Duke questions the maid about them. The maid doubts Kitty's honesty. Mrs. Calvert becomes ill after the excitement. Duke accuses Jim of lying about being held up. Jim says he lied because he did not trust Duke and wanted to get back to the Calvert home. Connie tells her mother that she is not sure whether she loves Duke.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XLV

Abruptly, by mutual consent, Connie and her mother put aside their discussion of any sentiment existing between Duke Garson and Connie. And, after the moment of silence that resulted, Connie came back, almost in relief, to the practical difficulties that confronted them immediately.

"We can't keep this up," Connie declared. "What are you going to do about the pearls?"

"I haven't the faintest idea," Mrs. Calvert acknowledged. "I'm unable to cope with such a problem. Besides, I'm tired, exhausted. If I had my choice I'd go down to White Sulphur Springs for a rest, a change of environment, with your Aunt Carrie and her children. At the same time, I can't leave you here to carry on alone—"

A Good Manager

"Your health is certainly more important than the pearls," Connie told her. "If you want to leave, I could take charge."

"Yes, you have a talent for responsibility," Mrs. Calvert admitted. "I'll decide in a day or so whether to go. Of course, I wouldn't like to leave you while you have guests here, Mr. Garson in particular. However, that can be arranged. The fact is, I simply have no inclination whatever to pursue the mystery of my pearls. The loss is heavy, but not important. So far as I am concerned, you may do whatever you please about them. I'd like to leave it all in your hands, if you don't mind, dear."

"Right-o!" Connie declared. "Thank heaven, we're not the people who get heartbroken over a few thousand dollars. I'll do what I can, of course—but let's not get upset."

Downstairs, Connie, through long association and familiarity, went about the duties of seeing that the house continued its physical operation. Even the prospect of love had to stand aside for the sharp necessity of management. People had to be fed and there was a conference in the kitchen with the cook, who, as usual, had jotted down a list of needed supplies.

A hot water pipe needed a new fitting, and Connie herself telephoned the plumber. The gardener, Connie was informed, had no lettuce worth serving, and a supply would have to be purchased in Stamford. Also it was most important to get good cantaloupes.

When the chauffeur took the provision list into town himself, it appeared, the butcher inevitably gave him the very worst cuts. Connie put on a small tan hat and she herself brought the station wagon around to the front.

"I'll have to go into Stamford myself," she told Garson. "Would you like to drive in with me?"

"Perhaps I had better take my bag and catch a train back to New York," he suggested. "I don't want to overstay my welcome."

Duke Willing to Stay

"I won't let you go—not right away, at least," she announced. "I need your help."

The truth was that neither of them thought at all about Kitty as they were halfway into Stamford, perched on the front seat of the station wagon with Connie driving, before the other girl occurred to her mind. But it didn't matter—probably she was in her room reading, and Jim Tracy would appear shortly to occupy her afternoon.

A new elasticity enveloped Connie; her interest, her sheer physical sensations, took on a pervading warmth that brought back a keen sense of well-being. The contraption she was driving was a truck, scarred and battered from much use, and its use always gave her a rugged kind of pleasure quite distinguished from the smoother, more artificial niceties of conventional luxury.

"Oh, there won't be any trouble about getting me to stay if you want me to," Garson returned.

A Surprising Remark

Yet in the fresh air and sunlight of the out of doors neither of them dropped readily into the vein of romantic feeling. Objects were too clear cut before their eyes to stir the imagination; the rolling country, with the stone walls in all directions marking off ancient farm boundaries, suggested, with a kind of bleakness, the back-breaking toil of the previous inhabitants of the locality. The walls, now, were pleasantly marked, but in the making they had represented imperious labor of clearing the scant, shallow fields for the plow. People no longer worked that hard; certainly not in the same locality. The soil, the air, the streams remained the same, but the population, the dominant element, was entirely sophisticated, a people of generous financial resources. Where life had once been simple it was now infinitely complicated.

"The stores in Stamford," Connie asserted, "charge as much as New York."

"Yes, the people come out here to escape the city, but they bring along most of the city's characteristics," Garson said, thoughtfully. "Of course, they escape the crowd and noise and close confinement, but not much else."

"I suppose we're all trying to escape from something," Connie admitted.

"Are you?"

"I suppose I am—from the wear and tear, the humdrum of being what I am," Connie asserted. "If a thing doesn't change—life—it doesn't stay interesting, does it?"

"You ought to get more," he said, almost harshly. "If you don't you'll go to seed. Your life here is too soft. If I felt free to ask you, I'd propose right now."

DAILY TRUE STORY Suspended Sentence

"Dr. Zurmond," said District Attorney Harrison, facing the five people he had summoned to his office, "committed suicide, and yet with his last words he accused one of you here with murdering him."

No one spoke in reply to this. Doctor Garwood, the dead man's close friend, nodded his head gravely. Henry, the valet, looked down at the floor. Harold and Nina, son and daughter of the dead man stared silently at the district attorney. Mrs. Olga Preston, a stately widow, wore a black veil. Her expression could not be seen.

"I find it necessary," District Attorney Harrison continued, "to seek to solve this paradox. I must question you. You are under oath and I warn you that whatever you say may legally be used against you. Doctor Garwood, will you speak first?"

"I have known Arthur Zurmond for the past 25 years," Doctor Garwood answered. "We went to medical school together and our friendship continued to grow. It was two years ago that Doctor Zurmond's life seemed to go awry. I advised rest.

Servant Testifies

"He answered all of my pleas, however, by saying that he was pursued by something which no amount of rest and change could possibly enable him to escape. As I recall, it was just at this time that he was suddenly possessed with the idea of removing his children from boarding-school, to live at home with him.

"He said that he would not be with them much longer and he wanted to be with them while he could. He seemed to repent having confined them to winter schools and summer camps throughout their lives—a step which he had taken only because of the death of Mrs. Zurmond.

"At all events, Nina and Harold have spent their last two years at home and really have provided the one bright spot in their father's life.

"This is all I know that will be of any help. I went over at once and there he lay on the floor, a pistol alongside. It was—terrible." The doctor's voice broke.

"Thank you, Doctor," said District Attorney Harrison.

Henry, Doctor Zurmond's old and faithful servant, was next questioned.

"Very good, sir. As was my custom, sir, at half-past twelve, I went to Dr. Zurmond's study to see whether he had retired, or, if not, whether he wished anything before I went to bed. I knocked at the closed door of the study. Receiving no reply, I naturally concluded that it was vacant. I, therefore, opened the door, to set things in order and to extinguish any forgotten lights. To my surprise and horror, the lights were all burning brightly, while in the middle of the room, on the floor, lay Dr. Zurmond's body. He was in his shirt sleeves, his hair was ruffled, and he was bleeding from a wound in his head. A noiseless automatic revolver was lying on the floor near him.

"So shocked and surprised was I, sir, that for a moment, I froze in my tracks. As I approached the body I noticed he breathed. In that moment Dr. Zurmond gasped: 'Don't let her escape justice, Henry, for she killed me—Olga Preston has murdered me!' He said no more.

All eyes were at once turned upon Mrs. Preston, with an awesome and hateful curiosity. Before Henry could continue she lifted her black veil and said, "Yes, I killed him. I killed Arthur Zurmond. He deserved it."

"According to the testimony of another witness, the doctor seemingly was alone at the time of his death. How, then, could you have killed the victim? Were you present?"

"No," she replied rather wearily. "I was not."

"Where were you?" queried the attorney.

"I was at Bonnie Briar, a retreat on the slope of the mountain in the little hamlet of Kent Cliffs, where I have been every moment for the last two years until called here this morning."

"Can you prove that?"

"Yes."

"What do you mean then by saying that you killed Dr. Zurmond, if you were 60 miles away at the time of his death? These two statements are conflicting. Do not forget that you are under oath."

"Both of my statements are true," the widow replied. "I killed Arthur Zurmond with my thoughts."

Explains Motive

"I do not know what you mean. Will you kindly explain yourself?"

"I will. Fourteen years ago Mrs. Zurmond died, leaving the doctor with two very young children, Harold then being three and Nina one. Even without the care of the children, Dr. Zurmond's life was difficult and, above all, it was lonely. I was a young widow at the time. Mr. Preston had died just before Mrs. Zurmond. I was approximately her age. It soon occurred to me that Arthur and I might easily patch up our shattered lives by taking one another to fill in the gap. Evidently the same thought had occurred to him, for shortly afterwards his advances toward me began. But unfortunately for us all his advances were not of the sort which I had envisaged or desired. Yet, more unfortunately, I accepted them. I supposed that he did not wish to remarry so soon after the death of his wife, but would delay until it seemed a more decorous procedure. It was to be a long wait.

"I accepted his love as he offered it. For 12 years Arthur and I lived on the most intimate and, in general, harmonious terms. He constantly postponed the subject of marriage. Quite naturally, I wanted to be his wife, not merely his mistress, to be accepted by society, to come into his home.

"I did not realize what was going on in his mind at the time. I now believe that it was the spirit of his dead wife which had come between us. He had worshiped the very ground on which she trod, and his reverence for her dead was yet greater. The high position his wife had occupied was not to be usurped by another. Furthermore, he told me that my conduct toward him might well be called unselfish, but it was nevertheless unconventional. He did not wish to have such a woman in control of his children. Whether this was his real motive or whether it was mere selfishness, I do not know. I suppose that both figured in the result. In any case, after 12 years of association with him, I was dismissed.

Prompted Act

"From its earliest development I have been greatly interested in psychology. I had read many of the best authorities and had great faith in their theories. I had often seen them demonstrated in everyday life. I sought some means of applying this knowledge to the present problem. Though unfamiliar with the subject itself, I believed in all the suppositions and hypotheses upon which mental telepathy is based. I began to read books upon this subject. I got every book I could possibly find and devoured them. I mastered the theories. During my retirement at Bonnie Briar I maintained long periods of silence, during which I concentrated constantly on Dr. Zurmond. I reached the psychic state of being able to project my spirit into space for several minutes at a time. Knowing the doctor's set habits, I concentrated on him at breakfast time, at luncheon time, at dinner time. I lived with the doctor from a distance. I always knew when I had arrested his thoughts.

When I reached his conscience, although I was invisible to him, I thought suicide! Murder? No, suicide. I could feel my very thoughts enter his mind. I could see him tortured by them. How he fought them off! But my mind was stronger than his, they followed him, they haunted him. Dr. Zurmond had deserted me. It was right that he should die. My soul had died under his cruel verdict. Yes, I killed Dr. Zurmond with my thoughts. I drove him to commit suicide. What are you going to do about it?"

"There is nothing to be done, Mrs. Preston," the district attorney said quietly, "worldly courts have no jurisprudence in your case, you must live out your life under suspended sentence, to await whatever punishment may be meted out to you by a Higher Power."

CONFESSIONS EDITOR'S LETTER'S CONFESSIONS

Yesterday we told how the innocent author, a beautiful young girl, was lured to the city by the confessions editor, and we left her knocking at a door marked "Private."

By "Constant Writer."

Suddenly the door opened—just slightly, and I saw two menacing eyes peeking out at me. Placing my dainty foot inside, so the door could not be slammed in my face, I began to sob softly. The ruse accomplished what I had hoped. The door opened wider, and I squirmed inside.

To my surprise, several women were standing in the room. They were hostile toward me. I felt this instinctively when one of them turned suddenly and made an impudent face at me. Another young woman kept pushing me, and a third jabbing me with a pin. At first I thought perhaps it was all in fun. Then one of these ladies demanded in an irritated tone—

"Are you waiting to see the editor?"

"Yes," I replied, lowering my eyelids innocently, and pivoting my right foot on my high Cuban heel, and raising my petticoats to show a shapely ankle.

Before they could give me a civil answer, these women, who I afterwards learned were all jealous confessions writers, had rudely seized me by the legs and arms and dragged me to a window—eighty stories above the roaring street below. "Confess!" they cried. My head by now was being thrust out of the casement. I suddenly screamed and then——

Pay This Just Debt Now

To the public demand, voiced by the Hearst newspapers, that the government pay in cash the adjusted compensation certificates of veterans presenting them, the National Executive Committee of the American Legion has now added the weight of its emphatic endorsement.

Congress ought not to turn a deaf ear to the American Legion's earnest petition regarding a matter that involves the honor of the nation as vitally as it does the immediate needs of the veterans.

With all patriotic organizations the Legion shares an intimate knowledge of the hardships that have driven more than 2,500,000 veterans to obtain loans from the Veterans' Bureau upon their adjusted compensation certificates.

Rather than ask senator or representative in Congress, the Legion calls for redress to the urgency of the need among the veterans. It looks to the Union for the assistance which the prompt redemption of these certificates will provide.

These certificates represent the government's confession of a debt to service men. They are just as much a part of the war effort as any other government obligation.

The debt must, have to be paid sometime. It can be paid now by stopping the appalling rate at which we have been liquidating the values built up during the last 10 years.

After the war the government adjusted the compensation due the owners of railroads by PAYING THIS DEBT IN CASH.

To more than 7,000 war contractors it GAVE ADJUSTED COMPENSATION IN CASH.

To 50,000 government employes, who received an annual salary of $2,500 or less during the war, IT GAVE ADJUSTED COMPENSATION IN CASH.

But instead of adjusting in cash the compensation due the veterans the government issued to them 20-year endowment policies.

And for the small amounts which the government permits them to borrow on these policies it compels the veterans to pay 6 per cent interest, compounded annually, for their own money.

Why should the veterans, most of whom defended this country during the war for $1 a day and subsistence, be forced to wait years to collect their debt?

Why should the veterans be forced to pay 6 per cent interest on the small amount of money that they are permitted to borrow on these certificates?

By paying this just debt now the government will enable millions of veterans to tide themselves and their families over the most desperate days they have ever faced.

By paying this just debt now the government will enable its creditors to put hundreds of millions of dollars into circulation—North, East, South and West.

Paying this just debt now, when millions of veterans need it more than they will ever need it again, will turn loose millions of dollars whose expenditure will give to general business a powerful stimulus that will benefit the entire country.

Said a great British statesman—Benjamin Disraeli:

"Justice is truth in action."

We put the truth in words when we acknowledged this debt of the veterans and issued them adjusted compensation certificates.

Let us put the "truth in action" by cashing these certificates.

Public Utilities Inquiry

Gov. Pinchot Has Nothing to Fear In Investigation Proposed by His Opponents.

Resolutions have been introduced in the State Senate calling for an investigation of Gov. Pinchot's charge that the Public Service Commission, which is supposed to defend the people, is subservient to the predatory public utilities.

The inquiry is to be welcomed.

The resolutions were introduced by opponents of Gov. Pinchot. It is presumed they expect through the investigation to confute and embarrass him.

How they can entertain any such hope, in the light of what everyone knows about the public utilities and the privileges granted them by the Public Service Commission, is difficult to see.

Here in Pittsburgh we know, for example, that the Public Service Commission has given the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company a monopoly of bus service and that the company charges 25 cents, an outrageous price and two and a half times as much as is charged elsewhere, for a short ride.

Pinchot, confident of his ability to prove his charges, welcomes the inquiry, and well he may.

It is to be hoped the subject will be given a thorough airing.

New Mellon Gift to City

East Liberty Church Will Be Notable Addition to Pittsburgh's Architectural Beauty.

Not only the congregation of the East Liberty Presbyterian Church but all Pittsburghers can be grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. Mellon for the superb new house of worship to be erected at Penn and Highland avenues.

The Mellons are modest about their gifts. They do not willingly let the amounts of their donations be known. The cost of the new Mellon Institute has not been disclosed, and nothing is said as to what the new church will cost.

It has been hinted, however, that it will be scarcely inferior in grandeur to the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York. That means, of course, that it will be a costly and majestic structure. The architect's picture bears out the belief.

It is to be a notable addition to Pittsburgh's architectural beauty, and the citizens of every denomination can be grateful for that.

But it is also to serve as a community center and as a medium for social service to folk of all creeds and walks of life. A princely gift to Pittsburgh!

A Man's Woman

What is "a man's woman?"

It is harder to tell what it is that makes a woman popular with men than to tell what it is that makes a humorist able to draw a cartoon or a poet able to write a sonnet.

* * *

Not every girl can expect to succeed in marriage, any more than everybody can expect to succeed as a writer or a movie star.

There seems to be a special talent for marrying, which is born in some people, like talent for painting or dancing or cooking or sewing. You can no more teach a girl "how to win a husband" than you can teach her to write like Mrs. Browning or to sing like Galli-Curci.

* * *

So long as one woman can collect five or six wedding rings and another woman can't even get one marriage certificate with which to brighten her bungalow walls, orange blossoms and laurels will continue to be unequally divided. And there aren't enough desirable men to go all the way around, anyway.

* * *

There aren't any rules for the game, and a "man's woman" can no more tell you how she charms men than an animal trainer can tell you how he charms leopards and lions. Although, of course, the methods are superficially the same.

* * *

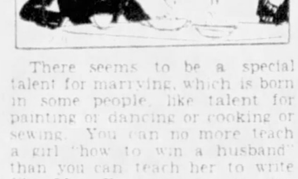
"Give them plenty to EAT, stroke them the right way, and let them ALONE, most of the time."

* * *

But there is one real secret, and it is this. You must LIKE animals or men before you can touch their hearts or charm or tame them.

* * *

Most women LOVE men individually. But the woman whom MEN love is the one who is fond of them collectively, who finds them interesting and entertaining in the mass, enjoys them in groups or crowds, and can no more resist being nice to any man she meets than an animal lover can resist petting any stray cat or dog he happens to meet.



That, if anything, is the secret of the "marrying girl." That is why one woman may be as good as an angel, as beautiful as a Greek goddess, and as clever as sin, yet no more able to attract men than a magnet can attract silver. While another little thing with no figure, no brains and no scruples can play the Pied Piper and have them all dancing after her.

* * *

She doesn't even have to practice. She plays them by EAR, knows them by heart, and marries them without trying.

* * *

It isn't art—it's intuition or inspiration.

* * *

For there MAY be an art of charming a man, but nowadays it takes GENIUS to marry one! And hypnotism to KEEP him married!

WHAT 'MAKES' CLIMATE

By Archibald Henderson

It is a singular fact that, in some countries and localities, weather and climate are words which are used interchangeably. This may roughly be said of such American states as Florida and California. Almost any day is supposed to serve as a fair specimen of the climate, as judged in year units. Clearly this condition holds truest near the Equator. The farther we diverge from the Equator, the sharper grows the distinction between weather and climate. Climate must take account of all weathers; and it is difficult to assess the significance of climate in regions where the weather is very variable and the changes of season are sharply marked.

Of all the influences which go to make up what we call climate, the most powerful and pervasive is temperature. The very distribution of life on earth, and indeed throughout the cosmos, is controlled by temperature. There is a comparatively narrow zone within which the earth may move to secure the blessing of life. Shift the earth but a little nearer to, or a little further from, the sun, and life would disappear—from the parching effects of heat or the chilling effects of cold.

The most vital of all factors in climate, then, is the heat received from the sun. The volume of the sun is about 1,000,000 times that of the earth, and its distance from the earth is more than 92,000,000 miles. Recent investigations by Jeans, Eddington, Abbot and others indicate that the surface temperature of the sun is about 10,000 degrees Fahrenheit, and that of the interior, at the center, say, is about 50,000,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

No adequate conception of such intense heat can be attained by the imagination. Every instant radiant energy is pouring out from the sun and flooding space in all directions. Yet so many are the atmospheric forces which retard this powerful radiant energy that, according to scientific calculation, only a tiny fraction of it ever reaches the earth. Although all our life upon this planet depends upon solar radiation, only one two-billionth of it ever reaches us!

The amount of solar energy which reaches the outer surface of our atmosphere is called the "solar constant," and its value has been estimated to be about 135 millewatts per square centimeter of surface at right angles to the rays, or 1.94 calories per minute. The important factor in climate is not this average amount, but the relative amounts of heat received on different portions of the earth's surface.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

"I do so want to make everyone happy," she begins her letter . . . and then follows it up with five pages of grief.

Well, that's the usual follow-up when you try to make everyone happy.

You can't make everyone happy, and it's no use trying. Nor is it your business to try—

Many people don't deserve happiness. Many of the people you love best . . . or the people who seem most cruelly afflicted . . . don't deserve happiness. They have notions and habits which are a nuisance to others and an affliction to themselves. There is only one way of curing such notions and habits, and that is by SUFFERING FROM THE CONSEQUENCES. If you, in your desire to play God, step in and relieve them of the consequences, will you be doing them any good? And how long will such "happiness" last? It will do them positive harm. And it won't last.

You can't GIVE people happiness. You can't cure them of the cussedness that causes their unhappiness. They must cure their own cussedness. They must win their own happiness.

Even God, whom you would ape, does not hand people happiness on a silver platter. He lets them suffer, to the full, the consequences of their own folly. He gives them the tools to help themselves—that is all. You can do the same. If they'll use those tools—more power to them. If they won't LAY OFF AND LET THEM DO THEIR OWN LEARNING.

You can't make everyone happy. Many people wouldn't know what to do with happiness if you gave it to them. They actually don't want to be happy, in spite of their whines and wheezes. They prefer being martyrs. Because it is one of the quickest and surest ways of grabbing the spotlight. It is useless to dry their tears. Getting their tears dried is the best thing they do. They are professionals at it.

Of course, if you want to make a human blotter of yourself, hop to it. But I warn you, from extensive personal experience, that you can blot and blot n' BLOT and they'll still drip despair.

You can't make everyone happy. But you've no right to let that make you bitter. As a matter of fact, much of our effort to make others happy is prompted by egotism. It gives us a Big Bang to think that we're arranging their lives. But, we've no right to arrange other lives either for weal or woe. It is their sacred privilege to do their own arranging. AND IF THEY EVADE OR MISUSE OUR EFFORTS AND SPOIL OUR PLANS, WE'VE BROUGHT THE DISAPPOINTMENT ON OURSELVES.

And if we haven't acted out of egotism . . . if we have acted from pure benevolence . . . then, less than ever, should we be bitter. For a good deed is its own reward.

After all, if you're really bent on uplifting humanity, the best service you can render is to be happy and healthy yourself. Keep your accounts in order, live up to your own ideals, render help if and when it is asked or indicated—and you'll have performed PLENTY.

Wise Words

Happiness and misery are the names of two extremes, the utmost bounds whereof we know not.—Locke.

Nothing is so improving to the temper as the study of the beauties either of poetry, eloquence, music or painting.—Hume.

There cannot be a more worthy improvement of friendship in a fervent opposition to the sins of those whom we profess to love.—Hall.

There is no talent so useful towards rising in the world, or which puts men more out of the reach of fortune, than discretion, a species of lower prudence.

—Swift.

No nobler feeling than this, of admiration for one higher than himself, dwells in the breast of man. It is to this hour, and at all hours the vivifying influence in man's life.—Carlyle.

Quick is the succession of human events; the cares of today are seldom the cares of tomorrow, and when we lie down at night we may safely say to most of your troubles, Ye have done your worst and we shall meet no more.—Cowper.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Hunger

Last night a tramp knocked at my door
(How fierce, how loud the north wind's roar!)
I swung the portal open wide
And bade the vagrant step inside.

He was a weary man and thin.
I looked into his eyes. Within
Their depths rank hunger shone, ablaze—
Such want as filled me with amaze.
Soon, then, with milk and meat and bread
The stranger from the dark was fed.

Into his eyes I looked once more
Stark longing brimmed them as before
How could I make such misery end?
God gave me words; I spoke: "My friend!"
At that a blessed light came back—
The light of hope that filled all lack.
Into the night one long denied
Went out, with spirit satisfied!

Text For Today

The Lord is with you, while ye be with him; and if ye seek him, he will be found of you; but if ye forsake him, he will forsake you.—II. Chronicles, xv:2.

Go to Bed

Stay In Bed.

THE STEPPING OFF PLACE IF YOU DON'T WATCH YOUR STEP.

Influenza and grippe are sweeping the country. They are not yet epidemic. But the situation is sufficiently serious to prompt Surg. Gen. Cumming, of the United States Public Health Service, to warn the public about it and to give a few rules for treatment.

The first rule is "go to bed." The second is "stay in bed." Of course, not one person in ten will pay any attention whatever to these rules.

For those who can't or won't take off time to be sick, however, the following advice is given:

"Avoid the use of any so-called influenza serum or vaccine. No specific preventive or cure has been discovered.

"Eat a moderate mixed diet, drink six or eight glasses of pure water daily, keep out of crowds as much as you can, wash your hands before eating, leave alcohol alone."

Incidentally, if you get the flu don't worry unduly. It is seldom fatal. Pneumonia following influenza causes most of the deaths, but it can usually be prevented if the flu is treated in time.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—With most of the fortunate winds out of familiar Broadway sails, racketeers are concentrating on the shakedown as a means of livelihood. When everything else fails, the breach of promise suit is one of the surest of all gyps.

There are some 200 shysters in the Tenderloin section who will take any case presented, no matter how flimsy, on "a percentage of the receipts" basis. They do not actually file suits, but threaten and harrass husbands who have had nights out.

Such actions are never taken against the professional philanderer. He has no reputation to lose. It is the respectable fellow with an occasional lapse who is the target. Three mysterious suicides in the past few months are attributed to the fear of impending disgrace.

While New Yorkers are often victimized, the prize packages are the outlanders in town for a frolic. Scouts angle for them in hotel lobbies. Solid, substantial, they are lonely away from the family fireside. So they are baited with the "party girls."

A bit of night life is adroitly suggested. The stranger is not particularly interested, but with a cocktail or so mellows. He is jockeyed into the company of one of the sympathetic ladies and under her blandishments babbles of his wife, his home and the kiddies.

That is all she wants to know! Such information assays pure gold. There is often not even handholding in the home-going taxi. Nize baby! Next day she rounds him to her apartment for a cup of tea. Several drop in casually and are introduced. Witnesses!

The stranger goes home. In due time the extortionist shows up. She has learned from him the name of his best friend and goes directly to him. She is a betrayed woman. He promised to marry her. The poor victim loves his wife, children and home above all else. So he pays.

Blackmailers have a gibberish of their own—as outlandish and resonant as some African tribal tongue. Some of it comes from Australian underworld patois, a sort of rhyming slang. A few samples: Twist and twirl—girl; whip and slash—mustache; cheese and kisses—a wife; fiddle and flute—a suit of clothes; dickey-dirt—a shirt; bread and jam—a street car; silk and twine—wine; apples and pears—a stairway; bees and honey—money; east and west—vest.

A 65 year old upper Fifth avenue gallant has become a collector of rare paintings. His youngish wife was complaining of his passionate devotion to his canvasses. "I know" he admitted sadly. "Old masters have become young mistresses."

At one of those high-blown literary teas the guest of honor was a former princess. To those grouped about she told of her christening. She was taken to the event in a gold coach drawn by three teams of white horses, the coach surrounded by mounted hussars in scarlet and gold trappings. "Different from your baptizine" I whispered to Bide Dudley also standing on the fringe of the group. "Quite" he grinned, "I was ducked in a crick!"

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

How many hours have you wasted in useless thought?

You dismiss from your mind all consideration of facts about your work as soon as you leave your place of employment.

You gave good service while employed, and you think that this is enough.

During intervening time you give your thoughts to matters of a personal nature, but of no real value, even to yourself.

You should have some respite from thoughts of the work-a-day job, but that does not mean that you should never think of your work during leisure.

You may have passed middle age.

As you look back you have been successful in only one thing, and that is in dropping all thoughts of your job when you were away from it.

To whom has this been more harmful, yourself or your employer?

Improvement that you might have made, which might have placed you in a better position, has not materialized.

Thus, are you not the greater loser?

Young men should give serious thought to the problem of their leisure and how it shall be spent and not be too trifling in their interests.

How they establish themselves is more important to them than anyone else.
